Should Drugs Be Made Legal?

Decriminalize all drug use?

Marin and southern Sonoma residents appear to have strong feelings — apparently evenly split on both sides of the question — according to a random telephone survey of the area by the Independent-Journal.

"I'm 100 per cent for decriminalization," one resident said.

"Decriminalization would be ill-advised," said another.

At issue is a resolution by the San Anselmo City Council recommending that the state legislature decriminalize all drug use. A regulated program of distributing drugs to addicts at low cost coupled with expanded drug rehabilitation programs also are encouraged.

The council Tuesday voted 3-1, with one abstention, for this program.

Those interviewed were azked: "How do you feel about this approach to the drug problem?"

David L. Odom, 33, attorney, 364 Ross Road, Sausalito — "I'm in favor of it. I don't think it would tend to increase the use of drugs — they're available now, anyway — but it would decrease crimes of burglary and robbery by addicts. This approach is definitely the trend for the future, because people will realize that you can't legislate on something like drugs or alcohol, and we might as well stop wasting taxpayers money trying to so do."

Faye Cincotta, over 21, homemaker, 2164 Feliz Drive, Novato — "I'm in support of helping them but not passing out drugs to them. If they are that way — sick people — they do need help, but I don't want to have low-cost drugs handed out. I do think they need a lot of facilities; I pay public school taxes, and I'd just as soon pay for that."

John Nolan, 40, bartender, 326 Cardinal Court, Mill Valley — "Yes, I think that would be a very positive approach to the drug problem. It's worked in England, and it might work here. I think we should be doing more with methadone here."

Fred V. Mattei, 58, haberdasher and city councilman, 23 La Cresta Drive, Petaluma — "I'd have to read the whole proposal before I could really comment on it. But offhand, I don't think I would have voted for it."

Mrs. S. P. Schladweiler, 62, liquor store owner, 1 Plymouth Avenue, Mill Valley — "I don't think much of the idea."

Nora Zimmerman, 87, health food store owner, 11 Throckmorton Avenue, Mill Valley — "I'm probably not competent to say whether it's a good answer to the problem or not, but I don't think I'd like to see it happen. Drugs shouldn't be so easy to use. I believe in good living and good eating, and that approach doesn't sound like it goes along with my philosophy."

Sally Shubin, 30, dental assistant, 887 Marin Drive, Mill Valley — "In college . . . I decided that unlimited drug clinics of that type involve too much manpower, need too much money, and are just too hard to handle, so I'd have to say no on the clinics. As for decriminalizing drug use, I'm not so sure. I guess it would probably be a good idea."

Palmer O. Wilkins, 39, safety engineer, 1291 Leafwood Heights, Novato — "I'm opposed to decriminalization and to making drugs available to addicts and causing others to become addicts themselves. The added supply would just increase the problem. It crosses my mind that the San Anselmo City Council would do best to mind affairs in which they have expertise and stay out of the area where they're out of their element. There are organizations that are far more capable to handle this."

Joseph H. West, 75, retired Air Force officer, 193 San Andreas Drive, Novato — "I'm all for putting more heat on the pushers. I think they are the ones who should be punished. They are the ones who entice youngsters in order to fatten their own pocketbooks. On quick notice, the San Anselmo program doesn't appeal to me . . . I also don't think the state should get into the business of furnishing drugs."

Rosemary Tufts, 40, homemaker, 45 Ridgecrest Road, Kentfield — "I don't think having marijuana a crime does any good, but I hate to see what will happen if decriminalizing it increases use, because now they're saying it does all sorts of terrible things. I don't think the state would do it in any case."

Dixie School Slates March Tax Election

A revenue increase election to raise spending per pupil by $150 will face voters in the Dixie School District on March 4.

The Dixie School District Board unanimously approved balloting a measure to raise about $375,000 to maintain the district's current program, according to Supt. Clifford W. Campbell.

The action on Wednesday was endorsed by Campbell and the district's Citizens Finance Advisory Group, an organization of 37 residents who have met eight times in recent months to discuss the district's financial plight.

Approval of the measure would raise per pupil spending from $1,115 to $1,265, and result in a tax rate increase of about 26 cents per $100 of assessed valuation, Campbell said.

Campbell said that the need for an election to raise revenue has prompted the Dixie Teachers Association and the Dixie Elementary School Administrators Association to pledge that salary hike requests next year will be modest. The teachers' organization has said it will ask for less than three-quarters of next year's cost-of-living increase in the Bay Area. Should the measure fail, "We're going to have to lay off personnel," Campbell said, adding he envisioned cuts of up to 30 staff members.

But Campbell said he is optimistic about passage of the measure, saying that all 13 bond issue and tax hike proposals put before district voters in recent years have been approved.

"I think the people are strapped in our community. . .I think we should get what is needed to maintain the district,

Doctors Say Nixon Too Sick To Testify

Jan. 6 Is Earliest Date Given For Deposition

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A panel of three physicians said today former President Richard M. Nixon is too sick to testify at the Watergate coverup trial and cannot even provide a deposition until Jan. 6 — after the trial is expected to end.

The court-appointed medical panel, which examined Nixon at his home in San Clemente, Monday, also estimated the former president would be unable to submit to questioning in a California courtroom until Feb. 2, and could not come to Washington before Feb. 16.

If questioned for a deposition at his home after Jan. 6, the doctors said, Nixon could not be expected to participate in more than two, one-hour sessions each day — in the presence of a physician.

Defense attorneys for former White House aide John D. Ehrlichman, who had subpoenaed Nixon, had no immediate comment. Ehrlichman, one of five former Nixon aides on trial in the cover-up, has said Nixon's testimony is crucial to his defense.

The trial had been expected to end before Christmas.

The physicians, who submitted their report directly to U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica, did not explain the medical reasons for their conclusions. They said the dates were only "an expression of our judgment at the present time and are subject to modification by unknown future medical developments."

Nixon, hospitalized twice with phlebitis in his left leg since resigning the presidency Aug. 9, was examined by doctors selected by Sirica. The team was headed by Dr. Charles Hufnagel, chairman of surgery at Georgetown University Hospital and one of the nation's foremost specialists on cardiovascular disease.

Other panel members were Dr. John A. Spittell Jr. of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn.; and Dr. Richard S. Ross, head of the Adult Cardiac Clinic, Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore.

Hufnagel said the findings were based on the physical examination, medical records and an interview with Dr. Eldon Hickman, Nixon's physician.

"If required by the court," Hufnagel said in a letter to Sirica, "the panel can submit the medical reasons and data upon which it based its report. This would involve specific in-

Ford Plans Visit To China In '75

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford will visit the People's Republic of China in 1975, the United States and China announced jointly today at the conclusion of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's visit to Peking.

Ford's scheduled visit to China, the second for an American president since President Richard M. Nixon went to Peking in 1972, was announced simultaneously by the White House and the Chinese government.

White House press secretary Ron Nessen quoted Ford as saying of the trip:

"I look forward to visiting the People's Republic of China some time next year and to continuing the process of normalizing our relations.

It will not be Ford's first trip to China. He went to Peking in the summer of 1972.

The joint announcement, issued at the end of Kissinger's sixth visit to China since July 1971, said:

"The U.S. and Chinese sides held frank, wide-ranging and mutually beneficial talks. They reaffirmed their unchanged commitment to the principals of the Shanghai communique. The two governments agreed that President Gerald R. Ford would visit the People's Republic of China in 1975."

The Shanghai communique was issued at the conclusion of Nixon's eight-day trip to China in February, 1972. It called for making U.S.-China relations more normal and the United States promised to reduce its military forces on Taiwan as tension in the area diminished.

An official aboard Kissinger's plane said the idea of another presidential trip to Peking was raised by the Chinese shortly after Kissinger arrived in Peking Monday. The trip was scheduled Wednesday after Kissinger checked with Ford in a telephone call, the official said.

Neither side gave a specific reason for the visit. But the issue of Taiwan, the seat of the Nationalist government of China, remains a serious and unsettled problem in U.S.-Chinese relations.

The People's Republic of China considers Taiwan an integral part of its territory. The United States, on the other hand, maintains full diplomatic relations with the government of Taiwan as well as a defense treaty.

Under the Nixon administration, the United States sought to keep the Taiwan problem on a back burner, hoping that eventually the leaders in Taiwan and the leaders in Peking might hold talks which could eventually resolve their differences.

However, the Nationalist Chinese have adamantly refused to hold discussions with the Peking leaders whom they fear would seek to impose Communist control over Taiwan.

Ford's trip to Peking, therefore, is bound to create considerable nervousness among nationalist leaders on Taiwan, who fear that he may strike some kind of deal which would undercut their independence.

Ford, who returned earlier this week from a trip to the Far East and a summit meeting with Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, meanwhile was awaiting a message documenting the new tentative U.S.-Soviet agreement to put a ceiling on each country's offensive nuclear weapons.

He planned to make the 10-year accord public once he received the aide de memoir from the Soviets. The White House has said only that each side would be limited to less than 2,500 missles and strategic bombers under new negotiating guidelines that could lead to a new, 10-year arms control treaty.

NO CUT RATE FOR RETIRED SECRETARY

OAKLAND (UPI) — A 63-year-old woman on pension has won a court battle to prevent the East Bay Municipal Utilities District from cutting her check by 60 cents a month.

Superior Judge Spurgeon Avakaian ordered the utility district to restore the 60 cents to the monthly pension check of Helene Altasserre, a retired secretary.

Miss Altasserre will also get $9.60 in damages and $6.40 in court costs.

She retired Aug. 1, 1973, after working for the district 37 years and got a $534.40 monthly pension. But three months later the pension was cut by the 60 cents, and $1.80 was taken for alleged overpayment during the first three months of her retirement.

The woman took the district to small claims court and won there. An appeal by the district to Superior Court resulted in Miss Altasserre being upheld again in her right to the 60 cents.

District officials declined to say whether they will appeal the matter to a still higher court or will let Miss Altasserre have the 60 cents a month.

An Eclipse Highlights Chilly Morn

Marin and Southern Sonoma residents awoke this morning to find a low fog covering, some chilling temperatures and an eclipse of the moon about 6:30 a.m.

The spectacle of earth's shadow moving slowly across the smoked gold face of the moon was completed for those in the eastern part of the county shortly before the blanked-out moon disappeared behind the hills of West Marin.

By midmorning the fog had vanished and ideal fall conditions prevailed which the weather bureau said should continue through the weekend. The forecast called for overnight lows in the 30s and tomorrow's highs in the mid-60s.

While the North Bay was experiencing good Thanksgiving Day weather yesterday a mild earthquake — described as "mild to moderate" — was felt in the Hollister area. It was recorded at 5.25 on the Richter scale.

Temperatures yesterday in Marin ranged from 58 degrees in Mill Valley to 63 in Sausalito. Readings, however, took a nose-dive overnight with Woodacre recording a low of 30. Other overnight readings: San Rafael, 42; Sausalito, 41; Mill Valley, 34; Homestead Valley, 44; Novato, 32; Petaluma, 31, and Tam Valley, 44.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Mrs. King Asked To March

BOSTON (UPI) — Mrs. Martin Luther King Jr., widow of the slain civil rights worker, was invited to lead a planned march and City Hall rally today to support court-ordered school integration.

Mrs. King

"The tensions and violence of the past several weeks have created a division which we, the residents of Massachusetts cannot condone," said a statement signed by the sponsors of the rally, the Committee for Integrated Quality Education.

Also invited were Rep. Robert Drinan, D-Mass., a Catholic priest; Rabbi Roland Gittelsohn, and Thomas Atkins, president of the local NAACP chapter, in speaking at the rally at City Hall Plaza.

Yesterday, antibusing forces sponsored a pick-up football game and rally attended by more than 5,000.

Sentenced

BERLIN (UPI) — In a courthouse surrounded by water cannons and snarling police dogs, a judge today sentenced West German female urban guerrilla leader Ulrike Meinhof to eight years imprisonment for her part in an attempted murder.

Mrs. Meinhof, weak from a two-month hunger strike, was barred from hearing sentence passed because of her habit of shouting "swine!" and "fascists!" at court officers during court appearances.

Only a handful of protesters turned up.

Mail Flow

PARIS (UPI) — Mail began to trickle back into Paris mailboxes today and the post office said a six-week strike was virtually over.

The government Post, Telephone and Telegram service cautioned, however, that post offices still could not accept packages for mailing for at least another week, indicating the French will just barely be able to get their Christmas packages mailed on time.

Council Meets

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The Security Council meets today to approve keeping the 1,200-man U.N. peacekeeping force on the Golan Heights.

Secretary General Kurt Waldheim returned to New York yesterday from a four-day visit to Israel, Syria and Egypt, and indicated that Jerusalem and Damascus had agreed to let the buffer troops remain on the strategic heights for another six months.

The Council was expected to approve extending the troops' mandate, which expires Saturday.

Depot Explodes

SAIGON (UPI) — A bomb depot used by government warplanes to strike Communist strongholds exploded at Da Nang airbase today, injuring more than 100 persons, 50 of them school children.

The first explosions at the airbase 370 miles north of Saigon went off at mid-morning. The blasts were still occurring at mid-afternoon.

Initial reports said cause of the explosions was not known.

Albanian Stand

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union today reaffirmed its readiness to restore normal relations with Albania, China's staunchest ally in Europe.

Relations between the two were suspended in 1961 after Albania sided with Peking in the Sino-Soviet ideological struggle. Ties were finally broken in early 1964.

U.N. Strike

GENEVA (UPI) — The United Nations' 7,000 employees in Geneva staged the world organization's first strike today to dramatize their demands for higher salaries, allowances and pensions.

The U.N. information office refused to allow photographers and television cameramen to film labor meetings. "It is none of the public's business," one spokesman said.

Seize Buses

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Government agents today began seizing buses from private owners who pulled their vehicles off the streets of Argentina's capital city to protest a rejection of fare hike requests.

Organized bus owners pulled their vehicles out of circulation at midnight Wednesday, and the government of President Maria Estella Isabel Peron charged the owners with holding an illegal work stoppage.

French Abortion

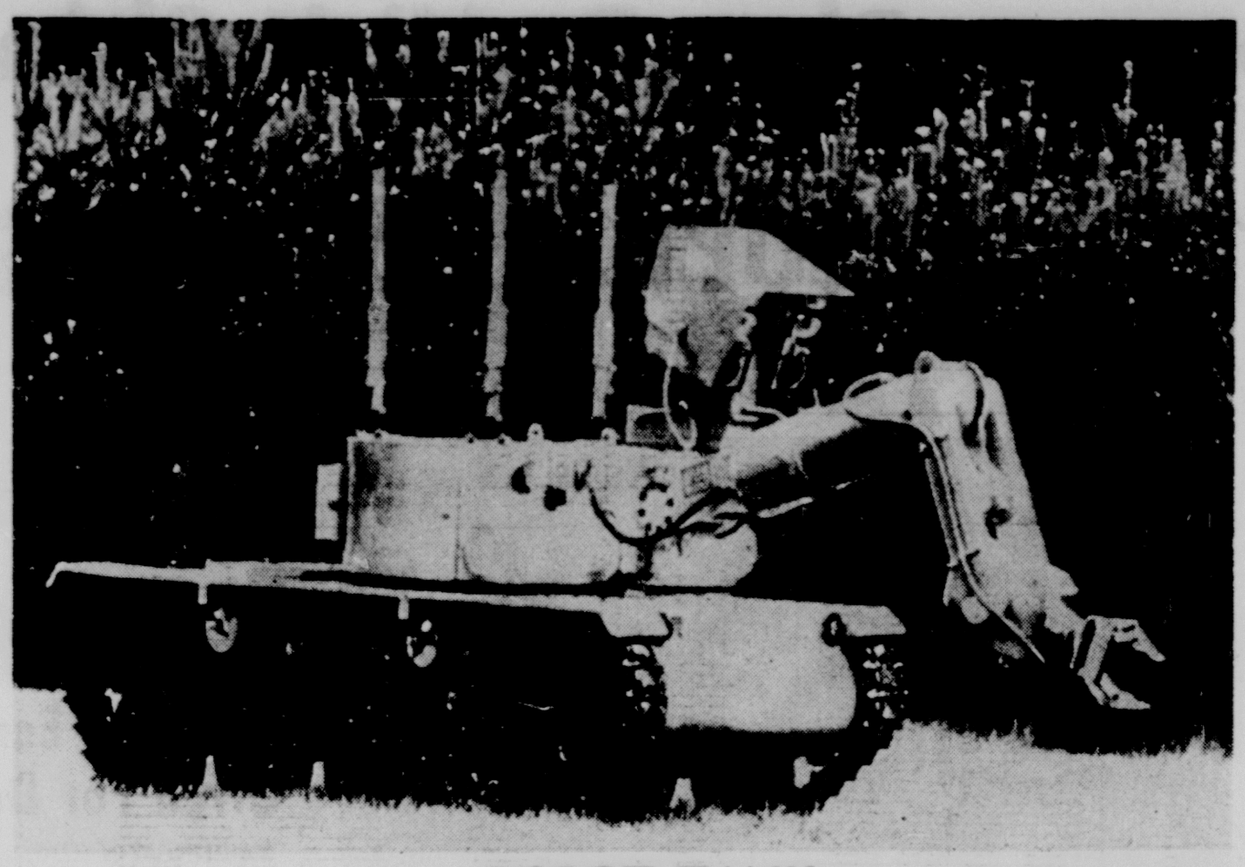

PARIS (UPI) — The National Assembly voted today to legalize abortion, ending a bitter, three-day debate in predominately Roman Catholic France.

The government-sponsored bill, which still has to go before the Senate, would legalize abortion in France during the first 10 weeks of pregnancy.

ROBOT TANK

The Nuclear Research Center In Karlsruhe, West Germany, has developed a robot tank for handling radioactive wastes. Called "MF-2," the tracked, armored and remote-controlled vehicle is equipped with arms, stereo television eyes, microphones, cameras, radioactivity and temperature sensors. It can be used to scout or inspect areas or buildings involved in a disaster or accident or otherwise rendered radioactive. It can gather earth samples and remove radioactive materials. The vehicle is small enough to be carried by truck, inside an aircraft or slung beneath a helicopter. (UPI Telephoto)

Canada Oil Export Tax Protested

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States should charge Canada for oil it moves through U.S. pipelines unless Canada agrees to drop an export tax that makes its oil more expensive than that of the Arabs, Sen. William E. Brock, R-Tenn., says.

Brock urged in a letter to Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger that the State Department try to force Canada to eliminate the tax.

He suggested taxing or restricting Canadian oil that flows through U.S. pipelines as a "bargaining chip.".

"We urge you to enter into immediate negotiations with the Canadian government in an effort to eliminate this tax," Brock wrote.

The United States pays between $11 and $13 for a barrel of crude oil imported from the Arab nations belonging to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. Canada, not a member of OPEC, charges an additional $5 a barrel export tax, apparently in an effort to restrict exports.

"Canada is our second largest supplier of oil," said Brock.

"As you know the U.S. has several bargaining chips that could be used to induce the Canadians to remove this tax" —the 400,000 barrels of Canadian oil that move through the Interprovincial-Lakehead pipeline from the west to Ontario and the 500,000-per-day barrels of imported crude oil pipelined from Portland, Maine, to Montreal.

"The U.S. is in a good position to curtail, restrict, or tax shipments of crude oil over U.S. soil for use in Canadian refineries," Brock said. "The U.S. could impose a pipeline transit tax on Canadian oil and this tax could then be earmarked to offset the Canadian export tax on crude oil."

Brock, reached by telephone in Lookout Mountain, Tenn., said he was "asking that this government act to protect American consumers from what we feel is a discriminatory tax by the Canadian government."

An aide said 17 senators also signed the letter.

Iran Offer To Seek Solution To Problems Of Oil Prices

GENEVA (UPI) — Iran said today it is more than willing to take part in a dialogue between oil producing and oil consuming nations on problems caused by rising fuel prices.

Dr. Reza Fallah, deputy chairman of the National Iranian Oil Corporation, said nations that sell oil and countries that buy it must get together to find a solution.

"Iran cannot remain indifferent to the problems which have to some extent dislocated the Western economy," Fallah told a meeting of international monetary experts.

"The door is wide open for a meaningful dialogue between consuming and producing states," he said.

The three-day conference began last night when the Bank for International Settlements told participants oil-producing states will have an estimated surplus this year of $60 billion.

The bank estimated that 45 per cent of the surplus funds have been invested in traditional reserve assets such as U.S. and British government obligations.

The breakdown of fund placement for the first three quarters of this year is $8 billion in the United States, $4 billion in the United Kingdom, $12 billion in Eurodeposits in London and $3 billion in such deposits in other European centers.

Henri Simonet, vice president of the Common Market commission, said, "It would be wishful thinking to assume a marked permament reduction in oil prices."

Simonet said oil producers will accumulate up to $300 billion by 1980.

"To avoid disaster we must accept that importing countries remain in debt for several years," he said.

Simonet called for coordinated action and negotiations with producers.

"We have always spoken about Arab capital but hardly talked with the owners."

Toronto Police Arrest Santa

TORONTO (UPI) — Santa Claus has been nabbed by the law—for passing out pamphlets for a downtown massage parlor.

Two policemen walked up to the jolly gent in the red suit and white chin whiskers Wednesday and told him: "You're busted, Santa."

"Far out," Santa replied. "And a Merry Christmas to you both."

Halliday, 27, of London, England, was charged with illegally distributing handbills.

Newsprint Prices To Be Increased

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

A series of newsprint price hikes announced recently by major Canadian suppliers takes effect Jan. 1, raising the average price per ton for American customers by about $25 to approximately $260.

Further increases may be necessary in the coming year if the current inflationary nflationary trend continues, according to an industry spokesman.

Cyclone Relief Force Mobilized

DACCA (UPI) — Prime Minister Mujibur Rahman mobilized a giant civilian and military relief force today to aid victims of a killer cyclone that swept across the southeast coast of Bangladesh.

Newspapers reported at least 24 people were killed and 100 injured in the cyclone which battered the coast yesterday with 90 mile-an-hour winds and 10-foot tidal waves.

There was no official casualty count, but the Bengali Daily Janapad newspaper said 2,000 people were feared dead in Cox's Bazar on the Bay of Bengal and on the offshore islands of Maheshkhali and Kutubdia, about 200 miles southeast of Dacca.

The newspaper also reported 100 dead in Noakhali coastal district and 150 fishing boats with an unknown number of fishermen aboard missing.

The storm heavily damaged the famine-wracked nation's precarious rice crop and submerged low-lying coastal areas near the port of Chittagong and offshore islands.

The Storm Warning Center in Dacca said the wind and water destroyed or damaged houses in the region and cut communications lines. Officials said the winter rice crop, which was almost ready for harvest, was badly damaged.

Heavy flooding in Bangladesh last summer virtually destroyed the past season's rice crop. The government said the previous damage contributed to the starvation deaths of at least 27,000 persons.

Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, trying to head off a new catastrophe, ordered civilian and military authorities to mobilize for rescue and relief work.

Two naval ships left Chittagong, 175 miles southeast of Dacca, for rescue work on outlying islands and more ships were expected to join the relief effort.

The cyclone was the 15th to hit the area in the past 14 years. The worst was in 1970 when official figures showed at least 300,000 persons died. Winds during the 1970 cyclone hit 130 miles an hour.

Since 1891, a total of 135 cyclones have battered the impoverished region.

Bangladesh, a three-year-old nation of 80 million persons, was born during the 1971 Indo-Pakistani War, which asserted India's dominance over the Asian subcontinent.

The Bengalis in Pakistan's eastern region declared independence early in 1971, but had to wait until India's victory at the end of the year before taking over effective control of their new country.

Be Wary Of California Politicians: Professor

BERKELEY (UPI) — A political scientist says former President Richard Nixon proves the voter "ought to be as wary of politicians who come out of California as we are of speed freaks from communes."

William E. Bicker, assistant professor of political science at the University of California, said California politicians are not responsible to local supporters or party organizations.

He said there was "an absence of all political restraints" in the Watergate scandal.

"There was no discussion about how the party would be affected, or what Ike would have done or what's right," he said at a recent California Scholars lecture.

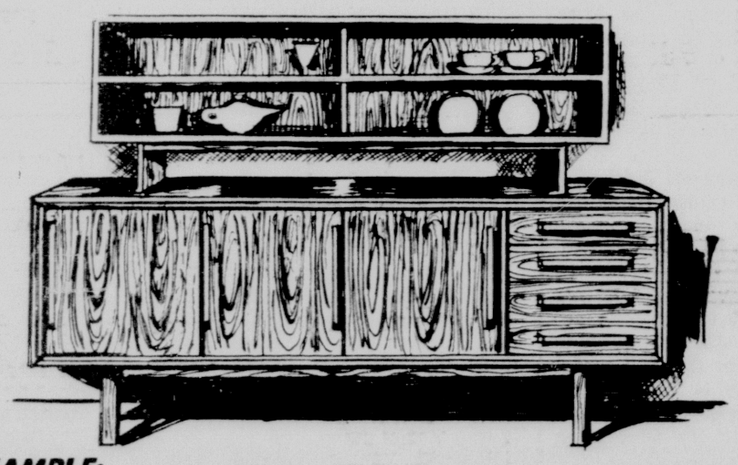

"The California political syndrome is that in theory you can do anything. Nixon's behavior is the epitome of what could be expected from a man who had his political antecedents in California."

Bicker said that Lyndon Johnson knew he could not carry on alone and dropped his attempts for another term.

The professor said California's political structure was fragmented and the only effective political unit was the individual voter.

SPACE-AGE SOS

For many years a white handkerchief tied to an automobile doorknob or the radio antenna has been the universal signal of a motorist in distress. Now, a spring-operated callbox, made by Solid State Technology, Inc., is being tested. A coded signal is transmitted to the central station and a confirmation is received at the callbox which is set into operation when the stranded motorist opens the door. (UPI Telephoto)

More Workers Laid Off By GM

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp. today announced a new round of layoffs and plant closings for January that will put another 24,000 employees out of work.

The layoffs include elimination of second shifts at two assembly plants, new production schedules at four others and short shutdowns at six more. They will bring GM's total number of indefinite layoffs in January to 64,000 workers.

Industrywide, almost 112,000 auto workers will be on indefinite layoffs in January, almost equal to the more than 115,000 industry workers who were on indefinite layoffs during last winter's energy-crisis sales slump.

Despite the cutbacks, GM expects to produce 385,000 vehicles in January, compared to 370,000 last January when it was cutting back sharply because of slumping sales.

A spokesman said the number of indefinite layoffs could climb higher than 64,000 in January as the assembly line cutbacks are felt at plants that build parts.

The layoffs and shutdowns are scheduled for plants that build GM's intermediate and full-size cars, and marks the first time since the recent sales slump began that the No. 1 automaker has cut production of those models. Earlier cutbacks were at plants that build slow-selling small cars.

GM said the second shifts at the Fremont, Calif. assembly plant, with 1,600 workers, and the Janesville, Wis. plant with 2,100 workers will be eliminated the week beginning Jan. 13.

Also that week GM will reduce assembly line speeds at its Buick division home plant in Flint, Mich., Oldsmobile home plant in Lansing, Mich., and plants in Fairfax, Kan., and Oshawa, Ont.

The Buick, Oldsmobile, Framingham, Mass., Lakewood, Ga., Lordstown, Ohio, and Pontiac, Mich., assembly plants also face one and two week layoffs in January.

GM also said its Southgate, Calif., plant which along with the Lordstown plant builds the slow-selling sub-compact Chevrolet Vega will be closed the entire month for "a model changeover." The Vega line was added to the Southgate plant last winter when there was a shortage of small cars.

The automaker would not say what models would be added to the Southgate plant, but it was believed GM may begin building its sporty compact Chevrolet Monza, Buick Skyhawk and Oldsmobile Starfire there. Those cars are now made only at the Ste. Therese, Quebec, assembly plant.

Parked Cars Are Damaged

A car driven by a San Rafael man swerved into two parked cars early yesterday in Marinwood, causing major damage to his own car and minor damage to the parked vehicles.

Michael Louis Mountanos, 20, of 357 Mountain View Avenue, was driving on Heatherstone Drive when his car crashed at 1:40 a.m. into the parked cars owned by Ruth Ann Nolte of Sparks, Nev., and Camellia Valley Supply, Inc., of Rancho Cordova, the highway patrol reported.

Mountanos was not cited pending further investigation, the highway patrol said. He was uninjured.

San Francisco Man, 24, Slain

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A man tentatively identified as Jessie Galvin, 24, was shot to death early today in what police said was an apparent execution slaying.

bwitnesses told officers Galvin was accosted by three men, knocked to the ground and shot. The trio then fled in an auto.

FORUM

554 East Cotati Avenue, Cotati — "I'm in favor of more progressive attitudes toward drugs. There's no reason to criminalize the softer drugs like mairjuana. The harder drugs are more of a health problem, like alcohol is, than a criminal problem. The problem mainly is that law enforcement agencies have been singularly insensitive in dealing with this — they refuse to recognize that drugs are a health problem."

Suzanne Kendig, 49, student and former techer, 64 Mountain View Road, Fairfax — "I am all for discouraging the pushers and helping people who are hooked. It does sound like a sensible approach that's bound to help."

Mrs. H. E. O'Brien, 62, 909 Magnolia Avenue, Larkspur — "I don't go along with decriminalization of drugs, I'm really rabid on the subject. I think they're paying too much attention to addicts, criminals and stupid people and not enough attention to gifted children and people with something to contribute. If people want to kill themselves with drugs, let them."

Thomas R. Nell, 29, photographer, 21 Main Street, Tiburon — "I'm somewhat in favor of decriminalizing marijuana, but the others, no. I'm not for lightening up on harder drugs at all."

Janet M. Russell, 39, legal secretary, 60 La Cuesta, Greenbrae — "I think this idea is long overdue, and I'm very much in favor of it."

Herbert Greer, 58, information officer, 115 Sunrise Lane, Novato — "The San Anselmo City Council's action was ill-advised. If the state legislature followed their advice, they would create a tremendous law enforcement problem. It just won't work as a solution to the drug problem."

Jo Ann Holster, 21, student, 64 Madrone Park Circle, Mill Valley — "I don't think making drugs so easily accessible will solve anything. I don't know what the solution is, but I don't think that's it. They should give psychiatric help to addicts, because the drugs aren't the source of their problems, it's something else."

David Berger, 10, 568 Wilson Avenue, Novato — "I'd say it would be perfect except . . . the dope pushers would probably find a way to take advantage of it and sell more. Marijuana is not good because it makes people ill and all."

Terry DeYoung, 25, self-employed, 330 Canal Street — "I approve of the San Anselmo program."

L. Gilbert Akers, 76, retired, 572 Summit Avenue, Mill Valley — "I don't know if it would work. We should get to the pushers and should be a lot tougher with them in the courts."

Gerri Weber, 28, travel agent, 119 Glen Park, San Rafael — "It would certainly have to have a great many controls. Something has to be done, but it would probably cost taxpayers a fortune."

Heather Kortebein, 42, artist, 429 Johnson Street, Sausalito — "I think it should be decriminalized, without a doubt."

Frank Douglas, 42, minister, 72 Crescente, Bolinas — "I'm 100 per cent for it. The other approach hasn't worked out, and it seems there's an awful lot of money being made by negative forces. This approach will definitely work better, because by putting it in the open, it will prevent muggings that endanger people's lives."

Ann Murch, over 30, midwife, Blackberry Farm, Bolinas — "In England what we had was that heroin addicts registered and got their drugs at the pharmacy. That worked out very well. I think the idea should be considered."

Jack Moldenhour, 38, salesman, Starbuck Drive, Muir Beach — "I'm for legalized use of marijuana, but not hard drugs. I don't believe our society is ready for that."

Text Of Physician's Report

To: The Honorable John J. Sirica, U.S. District Judge

From: Medical panel — Charles A. Hufnagel, M.D., chairman; Richard S. Ross, M.D. and John A. Spittell Jr, M.D.

Subject: the physical condition of Mr. Richard M. Nixon.

On Nov. 25, 1974, we visited the Long Beach Memorial Hospital where we interviewed Dr. Eldon Hickman and reviewed the medical records, X-rays, special studies and laboratory data of Mr. Richard M. Nixon. Subsequently, we examined Mr. Nixon at his home on the same date. The examination of Mr. Nixon was carried out with his consent and cooperation. On the basis of the above, we submit the following opinions to the questions posed in the court order filed on Nov. 13, 1974:

1. Mr. Nixon is not personally able to travel to Washington, D.C. to testify.

2. It is difficult to predict with accuracy when such a trip to Washington, D.C., might be accomplished without excessive risk. If recovery proceeds at the anticipated rate, and there are no further complications, we would estimate that such a trip be possible by Feb. 16, 1975.

3. Mr. Nixon is not presently able to appear and testify at a site near his home.

4. His recovery proceeds at the anticipated rate, and there are no further complications, we woudl estimate that he should be able to testify at a courtroom near his home by Feb. 2, 1975.

5. Mr. Nixon is not presently able to be deposed by the parties in this case.

6. If recovery proceeds at the anticipated rate, and there are no further complications, we would estimate that he should be able to give a deposition in his home by Jan. 6, 1975.

7. If a deposition is to be taken as described in response to (6) above, we suggest it be obtained in no more than 2 daily sessions of no longer than one hour each. There should be adequate opportunity for rest between sessions.

Respectfully submitted,
Charles A. Hufnagel, M.D., chairman of medical panel.

News Conference Called To Explain Arms Accord

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford announced today he will hold a televised news conference Monday night, presumably to detail the terms of the new tentative U.S.-Soviet agreement limiting offensive nuclear weapons.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said the news conference would be available to coverage by the television and radio networks, beginning at 7:30 p.m. EST.

Ford was expected to use the news conference to discuss the results of his recent Vladivostok summit with Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, in which the agreement was reached.

Nessen said that so far the documentation in writing of the 10-year accord has not been received from the Soviet government. According to reports from Moscow, Brezhnev has won approval of the agreement in the Politburo, the ruling body of the Communist superpower.

Both Ford and Brezhnev have kept secret the number of weapons and delivery systems each side has agreed to maintain under the new equivalency pact.

According to congressional leaders, each side would be limited to under 2,500 missiles and strategic bombers and to 1,300 missiles that could have multiple warheads.

formation regarding his condition, which we have been instructed is confidential."

He volunteered to discuss the report with Sirica.

Nixon's former top aide, H. R. Haldeman, testified earlier in the day that after he resigned as White House chief of staff in 1973, he took several Watergate tape recordings home and listened to one of them at Nixon's direction.

Haldeman, who described his job at the White House as "the one person totally available to the President day and night," testified that he listened last year to two White House tape recordings of conversations between Nixon and former White House counsel John Dean. He said he listened to one of them before he resigned April 30, 1973, and the other afterwards.

Haldeman said he spent two tedious days shortly before his resignation listening to a tape made on March 21, 1973. Then, he said, he returned to Washington from California the following July.

In the Sept. 15 tape, Nixon congratulated him for containing the original Watergate investigation. On March 21, Dean claims he warned Nixon of a "growing cancer" on the presidency.

Publisher Files For Dissolution

Independent-Journal publisher Wishard A. Brown has filed for dissolution of his 31-year marriage to Shirley Keppel Brown.

According to a petition filed Wednesday in Marin Superior Court by Brown's attorney, Samuel W. Gardiner, the couple was married in San Rafael on June 5, 1943, and separated Nov. 12 of this year.

They have three grown children.

The petition asks that the court declare all of Brown's stock in California Newspapers Inc. as his separate property. Other property of the couple is to be divided according to a contract that will be submitted to the court, the petition said.

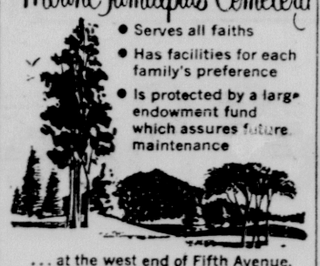

Brown succeeded his father, Roy A. Brown, as I-J publisher and president of California Newspapers Inc. in 1966, following the death of the senior Brown. Previously he had served as assistant publisher and general manager of the corporation.

and that's it," said Campbell, calling the need for $375,000 a "bare bones" request.

The superintendent noted that Dixie's bid for a revenue increase is not unique, since similar elections are planned by three other Marin school systems.

"It so happens in Marin County that we spend more than the state average to educate our children. . .But the effect of state law (SB 90) is to equalize spending throughout the state," Campbell noted.

"If the people want a program that exceeds the state average, they're going to have to tax themselves to do it," he said.

The district board set 8 p.m. Tuesday in the administration building to ratify Wednesday's action.

"CONSPIRATOR" — Maryanne Blair of the Food Conspiracy prepares a client's order for pick-up at Conspiracy headquarters in San Rafael. Orders dropped off by Sunday are filled on Wednesday.

Food Conspiracy: Another Way To Battle Inflationary Spiral

By REBECCA LARSEN

With food now almost as costly as a family's monthly housing bill, the idea of buying groceries wholesale with a group begins to sound like a way out of the inflation squeeze if instant delivery is not required.

The White Panther Party operates one of the more extensive collective food buying programs in Marin.

The party's Food Conspiracy buys food in bulk from farms, the South San Francisco produce market and wholesalers and then adds about 15 to 20 per cent to the cost to cover transportation and labor, according to conspiracy coordinator Anne Jackson.

Not everything in a supermarket is available, but products range from apple juice to cat chow to wheat flour.

The Food Conspiracy offers many organic and natural choices: raw sunflower seeds, short brown rice, unsulphured dry fruits, vegetarian mayonnaise.

Prices vary with the seasons, and it's hard to tell sometimes if the customer would do better at a supermarket.

For example, on a recent order list, cauliflower was 37 cents a head while at 59 cents in stores that day, but lettuce was 32 cents a head and sugar was 65 cents a pound, about the same as in the stores. Obviously, one has to shop as carefully via the Conspiracy as in the stores to get bargains.

Maryanne Blair, a conspiracy distributor in Mill Valley, is sold on the program though and sounds like Betty Furness selling refrigerators as she describes some of the products.

"Feel this bread," she says handing over a dark brown organic looking loaf that's as heavy as a brick.

"Look at this lettuce, you just don't find things like this at the grocery store." She tore off a leaf and crunched it in her mouth. "All this dark green outer part is usually stripped off."

An artist and College of Marin student, Miss Blair first heard about the conspiracy while living in a cooperative household in San Anselmo.

A short time ago, she moved to Mill Valley where she became a distributor herself. She also buys for the four people in her own house at a weekly cost of from $9 to $20. She estimates that anyone willing to give up the many conveniences and wide selection available in the supermarkets can save about 30 per cent on their food bill. "We really eat like kings," she says.

The 20 customers who buy food through her have to drop off their orders and money by Sunday at 5 p.m. Their food is delivered late in the day Wednesday.

To begin using a distribution center, customers must first pay a $3 registration fee. Miss Blair gets to keep this initial fee for the trouble of handling the orders.

"But I'm not in it for the money," she says. "I'm in it for the Aquarian Age spirit."

The party has a left-wing, hip young peoples' image of course, but there are some conventional establishment types participating in the food program, according to coordinator Anne Jackson. She estimates that about 100 to 150 people participate in Marin.

Maryanne Blair says that she would like to sign up more retired people. "They're the ones who need it most because of their limited incomes. They'd really flip out if they tried it."

The only major complaint heard voiced about the food conspiracy came from one customer who noted that the party sometimes mixes up orders or does not fill them completely. Refunds are then hard to straighten out, says the customer.

Distribution centers are the San Rafael headquarters of the White Panther Party, 16 Willow Street, and 311 Miller Avenue in Mill Valley, 124 Reed Street in Homestead Valley and 261 Cherry Road in Bolinas.

Taxpayers To Gain Return Protection

Taxpayers who hire somebody else to prepare their returns will have added protection next year as a result of the state Tax Preparers Act, announced Bette Wallace, Marin's consumer deputy.

Beginning Jan. 1, the act requires tax preparers to register with the state Department of Consumer Affairs, post a $1,000 bond and personally sign their names to tax returns rather than the name of a firm.

The law also requires them to register their business addresses to make it easier for a taxpayers to find them later.

The law will bring under state supervision hitherto unregulated tax preparers. Already required to register are certified public accountants, attorneys, banks, trust companies and those authorizes to practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

Kissinger Plans A Latin Tour

LA PAZ, Bolivia (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger is likely to make a tour of South America soon, according to Luigi Eunaudi, a Kissinger adviser.

Eunaudi said last night Kissinger wants to have firsthand information about the continent. That kind of interest would lead him to make a South American swing fairly soon, he said.

Eunaudi is in Bolivia for talks with Foreign Minister Gen. Alberto Guzman.

Jupiter Awes Space Speculators

MOUNTAIN VIEW (UPI) — The giant planet Jupiter which Pioneer 11 will visit Monday night tantalizes man as the solar system's biggest and most awesome object.

With its baleful eye — the Great Red Spot — and bands of churning salmon and slate gray, Jupiter looks like something out of an Edgar Allan Poe nightmare.

Jupiter's volume is 1,300 times that of earth. It contains two-thirds of all the material in the solar system, except for the sun.

Circling Jupiter are 13 moons, four the size of the planet Mercury, moving in opposite directions.

Guarding the monster are belts of radiation more deadly than a dozen hydrogen bombs. Electric fields can build up charges on the unmanned spacecraft which would arc between components like lightning.

If Pioneer survives these perils, it will loop around Jupiter and pass on for a spacecraft's first journey to Saturn, a hauntingly beautiful planet with three rings.

To reach Jupiter, the fifth planet out from the sun, Pioneer has voyaged 20 months and 620 million miles past Mars and through the Asteroid Belt.

Monday night, Pioneer will zip under the planet's South Pole 26,600 miles above the cloud tops. With a boost from Jupiter's orbital motion, it will hit a speed of 107,000 miles an hour — the highest ever achieved by a manmade object.

The path for this exploit was prepared a year ago by Pioneer 10, the first to encounter Jupiter. Pioneer 10 never got closer than 82,000 miles, but it learned enough to make its sister's visit possible.

The inner radiation belt, for example, forms a doughnut with Jupiter sitting in the hole. Sweeping up through the hole, Pioneer 11 will avoid the widest area of radiation.

Still, it will be subjected to 40,000 times the radiation in earth's belts. The space agency hopes the exposure will be brief enough to keep the radiation from "killing" the instruments.

Pioneer 10 found that Jupiter is composed mainly of liquid hydrogen. It has no solid surface and possibly a dense core of hydrogen solidified. The question of whether Jupiter's atmosphere harbors some form of life remains to be answered.

The planet radiates 2.5 times the amount of heat it receives from the sun. Probably this heat dates back to the birth of the planet 4.5 billion years ago.

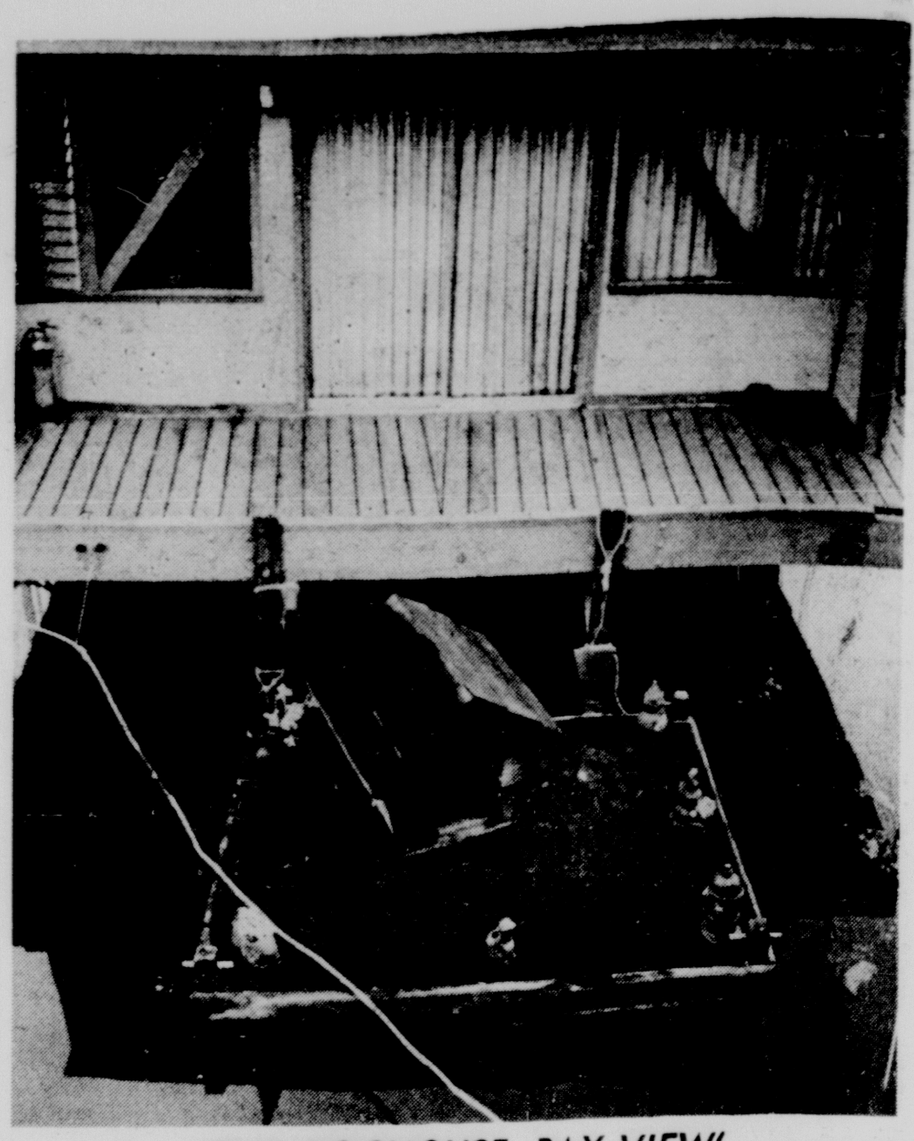

The Great Red Spot is a permanent hurricane, 20,000 miles wide, that has been raging for at least 400 years.

The four biggest of Jupiter's moons appear to have atmospheres, and Pioneer 10 found that Callisto, which receives the least radiation, would be the best target for the first manned trip to the Jovian region.

Pioneer 10 data suggested that Jupiter emits huge bursts of electrons throughout the solar system. This theory, if true, means scientists must discard much of what they believed about cosmic rays.

Monday's encounter should add vastly to knowledge not only about the planet, but to the fundamental question of the origin of the solar system.

Then, when Pioneer 11 sails by Saturn Sept. 5, 1979, it might discover the makeup of its three spectacular rings. Now it is theorized that they consist of huge chunks of flying rock.

'ONE DOGHOUSE, BAY VIEW'

Who says you can't live on a houseboat and still have a dog? The owner of this residence moored off Bob's Boatyard in Sausalito seems to think enough of Fido to give him a floating home, completely astroturfed and sporting a fire hydrant (at right). Independent-Journal photographer Alfred M. Arn said he didn't see the tenant at home but assumed it was a damp-looking water spaniel he passed on the dock.

Love-Making Minister Loses Job

KAMPALA, Uganda (UPI) — President Idi Amin fired his foreign minister, former New York model Princess Elizabeth Bagaya, because she made love to an unidentified European in a Paris airport restroom, Uganda Radio said.

The president also accused her of consorting with the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency and the British security services.

"Miss Bagaya made love to an unknown European in a toilet," Amin said in announcing her dismissal yesterday.

A government statement said Amin deplored such conduct.

Diplomats said they had received reports that Miss Bagaya, who is believed to be in her late 20s, was still in Uganda under close surveillance without a permit to leave the country.

Miss Bagaya, a tall, slim woman with a degree to practice law, was named foreign minister last February after acting as the country's roving ambassador since Amin seized power in January, 1971.

The body of her predecessor in the foreign ministry was found floating in the Nile river a month after she took over his job.

Miss Bagaya, who was a successful model in New York before entering politics, carries the title of princess as a member of the former ruling family of the now defunct kingdom of Toro in Uganda.

Loot Recovered From Chicago Vault Heist Less Than Thought

CHICAGO (UPI) — Now that a machine has calculated the part of the armored express company loot dredged out of a basement hole last week, it's not the $2.2 million authorities thought it was.

Authorities said Wednesday that the cash accounted for only $1.45 million of the missing $4.3 million taken in the Oct. 20 armored express company burglary — the largest theft in U.S. history.

The FBI said it arrived at the $2.2 million figure by a check of labels on the bundles of $5, $10 and $20 bills in duffel bags hauled out of a seven-foot hole in the basement of a home owned by the grandmother of Ralph Marrera. He was the only guard on duty the night of the heist.

A machine count of the money, however, tabulated the total at $1,454,140. The FBI said about $1.45 million was returned to the insurance company of Purolator Security, Inc., the parent of Armored Express Co.

Authorities are still seeking the rest of the money, though they believe about $1.5 million is locked up in five banks on the Grand Cayman Island in the British West Indies. There, two prime suspects in the case, Pasquale Marzano and Luigi DiFonzo, were arrested.

The FBI said half a million of the loot was in canceled checks and nonnegotiable securities. Another $39,000 was taken from Marzano and DiFonzo when they were apprehended.

New Steps Are Taken On Health Care Cuts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For the second time in a week, the Ford administration has taken steps to cut the federal budgets of Medicare health insurance for the aged and Medicaid for the needy.

Similar attempts under President Richard M. Nixon failed.

President Ford Tuesday submitted budget-cutting legislation to Congress that would require the aged and the poor to pay more for their subsidized hospital and doctor bills, saving taxpayers $720 million this year. Such legislation in January, 1973, failed to gain congressional sponsors.

Then, on Thanksgiving Day, the government announced a plan to eliminate unnecessary hospital and nursing home admissions and medical services under Medicare and Medicaid.

Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said the plan, effective Feb. 1, will save "millions of dollars a year."

"The utilization review procedures spelled out in these new regulations will improve the overall quality of care provided to Medicare and Medicaid beneficiaries and increase the overall efficiency of our total health care system," Weinberger said.

The new rules require doctors, nurses and other health professionals to review the admission of subsidized patients to hospitals and nursing homes within two days of their admission.

A stronger proposal last February would have required preadmission review. The American Medical Association and American Hospital Association threatened to file suit against the government and Nixon persuaded HEW to change its mind.

Drama Critic Dead

NEW YORK (UPI) — Robert Bruce Coleman Jr., drama critic for the New York Daily Mirror for nearly four decades, died Wednesday at Medical Arts Center Hospital. He was 74.

New Talks In Shipyard Strike Seen

PASCAGOULA, Miss. (UPI) — A union leader indicated today negotiations may resume sometime next week in efforts to end a crippling 12-day-old strike at Ingalls Shipyard.

Ed Lowe, president of the striking Pascagoula Metal Trades Council, said no progress has been made in getting back to the bargaining table since talks were broken off a week ago.

But he said union leaders were willing to resume the negotiations anytime and said federal mediator LeLand Dean was hopeful the talks might resume sometime next week.

"We're waiting for Dean to get back to us," Lowe said. "It probably will be after the holidays."

He said he didn't feel that labor and management positions were all that far apart, although he said Ingalls officials have shown no willingness to accept union proposals for insertion of a cost of living wage provision in any new contract.

Ingalls officials said earlier this week that the strike by more than 13,000 production workers was threatening to push the shipyard behind schedule on the construction of 30 Navy destroyers.

Apology By Butz Ordered By Ford

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford today personally rebuked Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz for repeating a joking reference to Pope Paul VI in a mocking Italian accent and forced Butz to apologize to anyone who may have been offended.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford felt the public explanation which Butz issued earlier in the day was "inadequate" and Butz agreed to "elaborate" on his statement.

A few minutes later, Butz reissued the same statement, adding that "I sincerely apologize for any part I played" in the controversy.

Nessen said that although Ford admonished Butz for the remark, he did not feel the agriculture secretary should be dismissed because of it.

Butz aroused the anger of Roman Catholic prelates and others with his "off the record" reference to the Pope while he was discussing population and birth control:

"He no playa the game; he no maka the rules," Butz told newsmen last Wednesday in a mock Italian accent.

Ford met privately for 15 minutes in the Oval Office with Butz following a domestic council meeting on land use which several cabinet officials, including Butz, attended.

The office of Cardinal Terence Cooke in New York accused Butz of "ethnic mockery and vulgar religious prejudice" and demanded an apology or Butz' resignation. Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., called for Butz' outright resignation.

Butz said in a statement issued at the Agricultuure Department earlier in the day he never intended to "impugn the motives or the integrity of any religious group, ethnic group, or religious leader."

"I regret that some such interpretations have been made," Butz said.

Nessen said Butz showed Ford the statement and the President told Butz, "the statement was not adequate and what was needed was an apology to any and all persons offended by the remarks."

"The President said he disapproved of the remarks, disavowed the remarks and in no way do they represent his own views," Nessen added.

Nessen said Ford told Butz that "he did not feel this comment justified Butz' dismissal — much as he disapproved."

Nessen was reminded that Air Force Gen. George S. Brown, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, also was recently rebuked by Ford for criticizing Jewish influence in the United States and he was asked whether Ford did not feel he had to spend a lot of time chiding members of his administration to refrain from such remarks.

"He spent 10 minutes with Brown and 15 minutes with Butz," said Nessen.

"I get the feeling he does not think this is a pattern endemic to this administration," he added.

Spokesmen for Butz said earlier he had not used the words as his own but had merely been telling newsmen about a joke, attributed to an unnamed Italian woman, which circulated through the World Food Conference earlier this month in Rome.

"It is unfortunate that a few remarks that I made at a news breakfast with 20 reporters last Wednesday morning were taken out of context in one account of that meeting and escalated in the news with an interpretation clearly not intended," Butz said.

Comment On Pope Not First Remark Regretted By Butz

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The comment by Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz on Pope Paul VI and birth control was not the first time his quick and tart tongue spawned instant controversy.

Butz, 65, has a long-standing reputation for blunt and sometimes offhand remarks that have been targeted at some of his administration associates and — on at least one occasion — himself.

When the Nixon administration imposed price controls in 1972 after an intramural battle in which Butz wound up on the losing side, a reporter asked him why the White House had reversed itself.

"Because there are some damned fools in this administration," he replied.

On another occasion, Butz publicly poked fun at himself when, despite his philosophical opposition to farm subsidies, he won White House permission early in 1972 to temporarily increase spending at a time when farmers were grumbling about sagging income.

"I'm spending money like a drunken sailor," he told a reporter.

Butz drew a flood of angry consumer letters two years ago when — after a sharp increase in meat prices — he said publicly it was "about time" farm prices had risen after years in the doldrums.

Later, Butz stirred more consumer ire when he said beef prices were rising partly because housewives were "bidding up" the price of a then-limited supply.

Criticism over the consumer comments left him unshaken. He insisted earlier this week he is the "consumer's best friend" because his policies are aimed at increasing food production.

Butz, one of the administration's most frequently interviewed and quoted officials, is conscious of the fact his remarks get wide attention.

In a joking comment to a reporter at a party here recently, he remarked, "I've given you more copy in the last three years than you've had in the last 10."

Passenger Hurt In Car Crash

Arthur Farmer, 21, of 70 Martling Road, San Anselmo, was reported in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital with head injuries and abdominal pain.

He was a passenger in a car driven by Daniel Dana Baruush of 18 Southview Terrace, San Anselmo, westbound on Fifth Avenue, San Rafael at 8:45 p.m. yesterday when it hit a utility pole, San Rafael police reported today. Baruush told police he swerved to miss a dog and hit the pole as he was westbound in the 1900 block of Fifth Avenue.

Top Italian Journalist Dies

ROME (UPI) — Mario Missiroli, one of the dominant figures of Italian journalism for more than half a century, died at his home yesterday three days after his 88th birthday.

Missiroli, considered a political moderate but a personal friend of Socialist leaders, served as chief editor of Bologna's Il Resto del Carlino, Rome's Il Messaggero and Milan's Corriere della Sera in a journalistic career that began at age 17.

He worked as a columnist until last summer when he retired on doctor's orders.

Street Party Slated Dec. 19

A neighborhood tradition in San Anselmo will continue this Christmas season as residents of Florence Avenue convene for their annual street party on Dec. 19.

Some 42 families on the three-block-long street held their first party in 1955, and have held neighborhood parties since.

William H. Jelinek of 53 Florence Avenue is chairman.

English Outlaw The IRA; Tight Security Is Imposed

LONDON (UPI) — Parliament and Queen Elizabeth today outlawed the Irish Republican Army and gave the police wider emergency powers to arrest and hold suspected bombers and terrorists.

Scotland Yard maintained tight security throughout the capital against retaliatory IRA attacks.

The anti-IRA bill received an unopposed third and final reading in the House of Commons after a marathon 17 hours of debate. The House of Lords gave it rubber stamp approval less than 15 minutes after receiving it and sent it to Queen Elizabeth, who signed it.

Despite a night of criticism by opposition legislators calling the measure too soft, the bill went through the House of Commons unopposed on its third and final reading.

Immediately after the bill passed through both Houses of Parliament it was rushed to Buckingham Palace for the Queen to sign, indicating the importance the government attached to it.

Normally bills received the formal royal assent from a commission consisting of the Lord Chancellor and the government and opposition leaders of the House of Lords.

The anti-IRA law went into effect immediately.

Because of time needed to get instructions to port and airport authorities, the immigration curbs included in it will not go into effect until midnight.

Scotland Yard warned Britons to guard against reprisal bombings. A series of blasts has wounded 29 Londoners since the IRA crackdown was announced Monday.

Worried London mailmen, fearing a new outbreak of letter bombs, refused to handle packages to and from Ireland.

Despite the delaying tactics of some legislators, the House of Commons passed the "Prevention of Terrorism" bill and armed police with wide powers to seize IRA suspects.

The government drafted the bill following bomb attacks in Birmingham last week that killed 20 persons. Police blamed the IRA for the blasts.

Bomb blasts have killed 49 persons and injured more than 800 in Britain in the past two years as part of an IRA campaign to end British rule in Northern Ireland.

The government-sponsored bill makes the IRA illegal in Britain for the first time and bans wearing of IRA uniforms. It also gives authorities power to bar or expel IRA suspects from Britain.

Spokesmen for all parties united to support the crackdown in Parliament.

The objections came from individual members demanding a doubling of the maximum five years imprisonment for membership in the IRA and seeking to give the police even tougher powers.

Old Masters Sale Tops $2.7 Million

LONDON (UPI) — A sale of Old Master paintings brought a total of $2,789,800 at Christie's auction house today, a spokesman said.

Highest price among the 102 works by mainly Dutch and Italian painters was paid for a Canaletto view of the Grand Canal in Venice. It sold for $67,600, the spokesman said.

PIANO REBUILDER — Lawrence G. Broadmoore, to whom "modern" is a dirty word, plays one of the pianos he has rebuilt in his musty 19th Century shop in Tivoli, N.Y.

(UPI Telephoto)

His Present Is Living In The Past

TIVOLI, N.Y. (UPI) — If you tell Laurence G. Broadmoore he's living in tte past, he'll take it as a compliment.

Broadmoore, from his hair parted carefully in the middle down to his spats, is a 23-year-old version of the 19th century man.

"To me, the word 'modern' is a synonym for cheap, low quality, boring, homogeneous, humdrum — everything but that which kindles the fire of the human spirit," says the proprietor of the Tivoli Player-Piano Shop.

The black ribbon on his pincenez brushes against his upturned starched collar as he nods in discouragement over the degeneration of the modern world.

The studious, slim young son of a Cincinnati businessman has slipped into the pages of a Victorian novel because, he says, the 19th century was the last period in which pride in craftmanship, beauty and intellectual honesty were valued.

To pursue those values, he has forsaken radio, television, garbage disposals and safety razors. He chooses to live instead amidst the quiet pleasures of a Henry James novel, a recording of Irish tenor John McCormack on his hand-wound Victrola or the satisfaction of restoring a century-old player piano to factory condition.

If a visitor enters Broadmoore's musty frame shop in this ancient Hudson Valley hamlet halfway between New York and Albany, the owner rises from his cluttered roll-top desk, greets him politely and ushers him to a glowing stove with "Brilliant Sunshine" emblazoned on its elaborate nickel grillwork.

"Anything new that tries to come through the door, I just say no," Broadmoore says, gesturing at the 60-year-old air compressor, handmade wooden piano pieces scattered about the dark workroom and the coal piled in a corner.

"There really is very little that doesn't have a better counterpart in the 19th century. I never cease to discover ways in which things have been cheapened. It's like a New Frontier of cheapness."

He says his friends fill him in occasionally on such developments as Watergate, but, "I don't keep up with those things. I go on the assumption that just about everything's corrupt, so what's the point?"

Broadmoore says the townsfolk in Tivoli accept him, "because I've established myself and I have a plan and I've shown I'm not insane at random. If anything, I'm just eccentric."

He charges about $1,500 per piano, taking about a month for each rebuilding job.

"To do anything less than rebuild it would be dishonest, because after a certain number of years there is more wrong with a player piano than there is right." His work is guaranteed for 10 years and he says his pianos shouldn't need adjustment for 25.

Broadmoore lives three miles away in a six-room house without indoor plumbing, heated by two pot-bellied stoves.

However, he makes a few concessions to the 20th century. He owns a truck from the 1940s to deliver pianos, sometimes a trip of 200 miles, and to pick up ice for his ice box.

He also uses an electric refrigerator to keep the ice blocks from melting in warm weather.

"It doesn't work, though. I'm going to see if covering it with canvas and straw would keep it as well."

Besides, he says, "The humming bothers me."

Another Crush Expected At SF Airport

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — An airport official says "Sunday's going to be a cruncher" similar to Thanksgiving Eve's massive traffic jam that caused hundreds to miss flights.

The official, operations supervisor Oreese Elmore, said yesterday drivers who are coming to San Francisco International Sunday to pick up passengers should gauge their arrivals so they won't be driving around and waiting.

"We hope the drivers will give their friends enough time to pick up baggage, about 20 minutes to half an hour after the flight arrives," he said.

Elmore urged drivers to use parking lot D, about a half mile from the airport, and take the free shuttle bus to the airport.

Airport police officer David Ross said most people didn't use the outlying lots and this is what led to Wednesday's tieup.

"They figure it's pretty easy to come in and just pick up passengers and drive on," he said.

Corn Fed Beef Seen As Delicacy

COLUMBUS (UPI) — The executive vice president of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation said today high transportation and labor costs are largely responsible for the increase in food prices but added a shortage of grain will soon make corn fed beef "a real delicacy."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture reported this week the cost of feeding a theoretical family of 3.2 persons rose $4 in October.

Farm Bureau Federation Executive Vice President C. William Swank, in an interview with UPI, was asked if the farmer received any of the October price increase?

"Not this last increase," he said, "because I don't know of a single commodity where the farmers have received a price increase in the last month. If they have it has been almost insignificant."

"It has to go to labor and transportation," Swank said. "The profits of the retailers are involved. We've got heat and light and all of those kind of costs that plague the entire processing and distribution industry. I think it (the increase) has to be there."

"The only price fluctuations farmers and growers have seen have just been the normal bobbing around and it is not a significant change," said Swank. "And that includes meat, milk and eggs,"

"The cattle and hog people are working off a surplus of red meat," said Swank. That's why prices are lower than the cost of production. Next year I would anticipate a modest decrease in grain production and an increase in the prices of meat, milk and eggs."

Swank said the corn crop, because of inclement weather ranging from too much rain, to a drought and an early frost, was not what was expected which will mean more grass fed beef next year.

"I would almost predict we won't have the amount of corn fed beef we have around now for the next five years," said Swank.

"There will be more and more grass fed cattle," said Swank. "Corn fed beef will be a real delicacy. Stores mey even feature the difference."

Growth Of U.S. Population Is Nearing The Zero Rate

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — U.S. population growth has fallen below one per cent a year and appears to be dropping toward zero, according to a United Nations report.

The Economic and Social Council put U.S. population growth at 0.9 per cent annually for the first four years of the 1970s — a drop from 1.3 per cent a year in the previous decade.

The council said young American couples anticipated an average of 2.3 children in a family, just above the 2.2 replacement level. It also reported a slowdown in immigration.

The United States, the report said, appeared "to be approaching a natural rate of increase close to zero."

Although much of the council's data was more than a year old, the report said the last two years had seen some reduction in violent crime in American cities.

The report said the increase in crime at the start of the decade was due to a rise in heroin use, but "it is possible that drug addiction in the United States has passed its peak."

The council said one reason for the drop in population growth was an increase in Americans living alone. It said the number of persons alone rose from 11.9 million in 1970 to 14 million in 1973.

Another significant factor in the drop in population growth was a change in the distribution of age groups.

The report said the number of children under five years of age dropped from 8.9 per cent in 1968 to 7.8 per cent in 1973, while the proportion of people over 65 rose from 9.5 per cent in 1965 to 10.1 in 1973.

It reported a sharp increase in the number of Americans who had moved from central city areas to the suburbs in the past decade.

The report put the population of the suburbs at 69 million compared with 55 million 10 years earlier, while in the central city areas the increase was from 58 million to 61 million.

Remains Are Found Of First Flesh-Eater

BERKELEY (UPI) — A prehistoric squid-like cuttlefish that preyed on crabs in the ocean which once covered California and Nevada has been determined to be the earliest flesh-eating creature known, according to a husband-wife scientific team.

The ancient cuttlefish appeared 100 million years earlier than previously believed, an article in the November issue of The Journal of Paleontology said.

J. Wyatt Durham of the University of California, Berkeley, and Jean B. Firby of the California Academy of Sciences in San Francisco wrote that teeth fossils were found imbedded in the rock in the White Mountains near Bishop, 65 miles northwest of Death Valley. The fish itself, they said, measured about four feet in length.

Durham and Firby said the teeth were those of a predator, apparently blunted by a lifetime of attacks on hard-shelled prey.

It is the first evidence, they said, that highly developed predatory creatures existed as early in the evolutionary calendar as 600 million years ago. They had previously been known to exist 500 million years ago.

The two paleontologists said the teeth fossils were found in rock that dated from the early Cambrian age and, at first, their identity was a mystery.

Then they noticed many of the cone-shaped teeth were arranged in elongated bands similar to a radul, the tonguelike structure found in most living mollusks such as snails and mussels. Further studies concluded the teeth were from prehistoric cuttlefish, they said.

Durham and Firby found 40 fossil specimens with the distinctive ⅛-inch teeth scattered over a wide range of onetime ocean floor.

Remains of most of the creatures from that period were swept away by currents and other disturbances, they said, but the fossils discovered were of cuttlefish apparently caught in an underwater slide and trapped over the centuries.

Drop Forecast In Wheat Crop

LONDON (UPI) — The International Wheat Council said today world wheat production this year is likely to be about five per cent less than last year's record crop.

At the end of a three-day meeting, the council said world wheat production in 1974-75, excluding China, is likely to be 325 million tons, compared with 342 million tons last year.

'SOMETHING . . . DOESN'T LOVE A WALL'

Kary Thompson and her dogs seem unconcerned that they are taking their ease atop a controversy that has embroiled the North Central Coast Regional Commission, the commission staff, a Bolinas homeowner and, now, the state attorney general's office. Just under that rubble from a past landslide is a riprap retaining wall installed by the homeowner, attorney Paul Kayfetz. (The concrete wall nearby was built years ago by a neighbor.) Kayfetz has been told by the commission's executive director, Michael L. Fischer that he had no right to build it without getting a permit from commission. Kayfetz says the law exempts him from the permit requirement. Fischer had asked the commission previously that Kayfetz be ordered to remove it, but this week agreed a decision should be put off until he gets the attorney-general's opinion as to whether he or Kayfetz is correct in interpreting the law. Meanwhile, the homeowner's $19,500 barrier against sea and storm induced erosion, remains.

Four Holiday Concerts Are Planned

The College of Marin music department will hold four free holiday concerts during December, each involving a different group, all at 8:30 p.m. in the Fine Arts Theater.

The jazz ensemble, directed by Douglas W. Delaney, will perform Ron Miller's "Seventh Sign," Tom Garvin's "Ralph's Tune," Greg Sorcsek's "Antithetical Arsis-Thesis" and others Dec. 12.

The concert band, conducted by John H. Myers, will play works by Holst, Hanson, Ives and others Dec. 14.

The community chorus and collegiate chorale, directed by Stan Kraczek, will put on Handel's "Messiah" with orchestra and soloists Dec. 15.

The community orchestra, conducted by John H. Meyers, will play Mozart's violin concerto No. 5 (Turkish), with student violinist Rhonda Bingham; Joaquin Rodrigo's "Fantasia para un Gentilhombre" with student guitarist John Magee, and other works Dec. 21.

Ford Said Ignoring Beaten Republicans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congressional sources say about 25 GOP congressmen who lost their seats in last month's election are seeking administration jobs but feel the White House is avoiding them.

The sources also predict President Ford will launch a major cabinet shakeup early next year and replace many of the Nixon holdovers with his own appointees.

According to the sources, about 25 defeated Republican congressmen and about 50 of their administrative staff members are out job hunting.

The sources said some of the aides went to the White House recently and tried to see William Walker, head of White House personnel, to discuss possible presidential appointments. "They were shunted off to two of Walker's underlings," the sources said.

"They have an 'I don't give a damn' attitude," said one congressional aide. "The people who carried water for the (GOP) elephant won't be around if Ford wants to win an election in two years. If Ford lets the men experienced in politics go down the drain, there won't be anyone to help him."

One example cited was Rep. Earl F. Landgrebe, R-Ind., who supported both Nixon and Ford but "hasn't been offered anything."

White House Deputy Press Secretary John W. Hushen said, "We are trying to be of assistance where we can, but there is no mandatory placement program for defeated congressmen."

The aides reportedly asked about the "job bank," a highly publicized computer list of administration openings, and were told it had been sent to Nixon in San Clemente.

The Washington Star-News reported that Sen. Peter H. Dominick, R-Colo., who lost his re-election bid, would be named Health, Education and Welfare secretary, succeeding Caspar P. Weinberger.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said, "I haven't heard anything about it."

Indian Suit Will Ask Land Back

GAY HEAD, MARTHA'S VINEYARD, Mass. (UPI) — The Indian tribe who greeted the Pilgrims in 1620 and participated in the first Thanksgiving was to file suit today to eject the town of Gay Head from 250 acres of common lands.

Beatrice Gentry, president of the Wampanoag Tribal Council of Gay Head, announced the plan Thanksgiving eve, saying the tribe would file suit in U.S. District Court in Boston.

"The non-Indians think that they should be able to use our land as their playground. We think non-Indians have taken enough Indian land," said Mrs. Gentry.

She says the land in issue was part of the Gay Head Reservation until 1870 when the Massachusetts Legislature approved the incorporation of the town and gave it property which includes the 250 acres.

Mrs. Gentry says the action amounted to wholesale theft of the tribe's only asset.

Colorado Barber Pegs An Upturn To Downturn

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (UPI) — At least one small businessman, a local barber, believes a downturn in the nation's economy might be responsible for an upturn in his.

Carmel Solano, owner of a barber shop in this university city, said he has more customers than he can take care of. Most of them, he said, are Colorado State University students trying to find work during the six-week recess between fall and winter quarters.

"These kids are competing for the vacation jobs and part of the reason they want haircuts is they want to have a little advantage in getting the jobs," Solano said. "Most of the students feel they have a better chance to get a job if they have conservative hairstyles."

Solano, who's been barbering in Fort Collins for 10 years, also said he has noticed the beginning of a trend away from the long hairstyles of recent years.

"They want something easier to take care of than the long hair," he said. "The guys want their hair shorter. Not the wide sidewalls of the old years, but more of a 'wash and wear' hairstyle."

But he said even with the shorter styles, men were becoming more particular about the way their hair is cut than in the past, when he sharpened his scissors only once every three years.

"Now I have put two sets of clippers away," Solano said. "I don't even use them. And I have three pairs of scissors which I have to get sharpened about every three months."

Coal Contract's Approval Pushed

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI) — United Mine Workers officials, in local meetings and radio and television messages, began a campaign today to convince 120,000 coal miners to approve a new wage contract and end their two-week-old strike.

Copies of the three-year pact, which UMW President Arnold Miller calls the best U.S. labor settlement in 10 years, were distributed yesterday to miners throughout the nation's coalfields.

A ratification vote was expected to begin Monday, and appeared likely to pass. UMW officials said if the contract was approved mines could open late next week for the first time since the walkout began Nov. 12.

The contract provides a 64 per cent increase in wages and benefits, but UMW leaders said there was some misunderstanding on some facets of the proposal.

Joe Duffie, a member of UMW District 17 in Charleston, said he was "very optimistic" the contract would be approved.

"There's still quite a bit of confusion, but it's possible we can straighten that out at local union meetings," said Carl Bunch, secretary-treasurer of UMW District 29, the union's largest, in Beckley, W.Va.

Bunch and district officials in other states spent much of Thanksgiving Day distributing copies of the contract to local union leaders who in turn passed them on to the membership.

Miller and other high-level UMW leaders were confident the contract would be approved but Bunch said, "It's hard to tell at this point. It (sentiment) still seems kind of divided."

The strike has caused layoffs in coal-related industries, including steel, coke and railroads.

100,000 Homeless Behind Typhoon Irma

MANILA (UPI) — Typhoon Irma roared out into the South China Sea today after a destructive sweep across the main Philippine island of Luzon that disabled two ships and left more than 100,000 persons homeless.

Early reports received by relief agencies in Manila placed the initial typhoon toll at eight dead, eight injured, four missing and more than $5 million in crops and property losses.

In the biggest single disaster caused by Irma, a domestic passenger boat with 102 persons aboard capsized yesterday in rough seas about 110 miles south of Manila. Four drowned, two others were listed missing while the rest were rescued. Four other persons were reported killed in other separate storm-spawned incidents.

In another maritime mishap, the Philippine Navy said the 1,712-ton MV Evelina, of Panamanian registry, ran aground off Mindoro Oriental, about 80 miles southwest of Manila. A navy spokesman said rescue teams were dispatched to the scene but they had no immediate word on the number and nationality of crewmen.

The Red Cross said initial field reports placed the number of refugees in six typhoon-affected provinces at 135,193 although they expect the total to rise when isolated areas are heard from.

Irma slammed inland yesterday morning with peak winds of 137 miles per hour and swirled to within 60 miles of Manila. Its strength diminished steadily during its overland march and at midmorning today, it was located 300 miles northwest of Manila. Its winds had tapered off to 75 mph.

Irma was the strongest typhoon to smash into the country since Nov. 19, 1970, when a storm with identical wind velocity hit Manila directly and killed more than 300 persons.

She's Back In Jail For The Holiday

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Josephine Tyler spent part of her Thanksgiving Day at the Newton Street Station of the Los Angeles Police Department.

She is not an inmate — she's just a good cook with a big heart.

For the past 13 years, she has been cooking Thanksgiving dinner for the officers on duty at the police station in her neighborhood. This year, 22 officers on the night shift were treated to a turkey dinner with all the trimmings.

A SPECIAL RED TREE

Designed to match the architectural splendor of the atrium lobby, this most unique Christmas tree was erected in the Hyatt Regency Hotel in San Francisco for Thanksgiving Day. Made of 100,000 poinsettia blooms, this 25,000 pound all red tree rivals the Charles Perry sculpture which towers four stories high in the main lobby area.

Soviet Wife's American Spouse Is Denied Visit

MOSCOW (UPI) — An American professor's Russian wife, who already has been denied permission to leave the Soviet Union, said today visa authorities refused to let her husband come to visit her.

The two married in Moscow last May.

Mrs. Irina McLellan, 46, a Moscow English teacher, said she planned to renew her application for an exit visa.

She said her husband, Woodford D. McLellan, a 40-year-old professor of Russian history at the University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va., hoped to visit her in Moscow during his winter vacation in December and January.

"I was called to OVIR (the Soviet visa office) today and told permission for his visit was refused," she said. "The inspector gave no reason and when I saw a higher official he said I was not entitled to a reason."

Peking Draws New Attack From Soviet Chief Podgorny

MOSCOW (UPI) — President Nikolai V. Podgorny said today the Soviet Union on the whole is satisfied with relations with the United States, West Germany and France, but he criticized Peking anew.

In a speech in Dushanbe marking the 50th anniversary of the Soviet republic of Tajikistan, Podgorny hailed the recent Soviet-American summit at Vladivostok as a major contribution to the cause of world peace.

"On the whole, we are satisfied with the state of relations with the United States, the Federal Republic of Germany and France," he said, according to the Tass news agency.

He said "it is with a feeling of pain" that he spoke about the situation in China. He said the Chinese leadership "openly conducts a line of aggravation of the world situation, comes out against the Socialist Community and does harm to the national liberation movements of the people."

He said the recent change of leadership in the United States, West Germany and France had not altered their commitment to detente. This was confirmed by the results of the recent talks with West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, Podgorny said.

He said he hoped there would be similar results from Communist party General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev's talks next week near Paris with French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

Podgorny said the Soviet Union and the United States had firmly resolved to continue "increasing the scope and intenstiy of joint efforts aimed at improving bilateral relations.

"The world public justly assessed the results of the Soviet-American meeting in the area of Vladivostok as a major contribution to the cause of consolidation of peace and the international situation," he said.

He said the Peking leaders had been unsuccessful in efforts to better the life of the Chinese people, adding: "The country's economy experiences serious difficulties, the principles of party development, of Socialist democracy and legality are grossly violated.

"The Marxist-Leninist teaching has been replaced by social-chauvinist ideas of Maoism."

It was the second attack on China in three days by a Soviet official. On Tuesday, Brezhnev denounced Peking for setting preconditions for talks on their border dispute and other issues.

Russians Accused Of Runs On Sugar

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Times today reported that the Soviet Union played an important role in the current global sugar shortage.

In an article by financial writer Elizabeth M. Fowler, the Times said the Russians realized in mid-summer that they were going to have a serious sugar beet crop failure. Soviet officials succeeded in keeping the deep extent of the crop failure secret from western sugar trade circles while they bought raw sugar futures on the world's commodity markets at prices averaging 30 cents a pound. They also bought spot raw sugar at 40 cents.

This helped to drive the price of raw sugar futures up to a peak of 65 cents a pound in New York from around 11 cents a pound a year earlier. The price dropped this week to 55.2.

By selling out their futures contracts at a profit of 25 to 30 cents a pound and then buying spot sugar at 40 cents, the Russians got their sugar at a net cost of 10 to 15 cents a pound.

The article said the Russians apparently bought at least 500,000 tons and got most of it in Brazil, a country that does not normally sell sugar to the Russians.

The Times article said this was the second time the Russians have bought heavily in the free enterprize world sugar market. Three years ago, the Soviet Union had a similar shortage of 400,000 tons of sugar and sent 40 ships to Cuba to load sugar only to discover that Premier Fidel Castro had sold all his surplus sugar for cash on the world market.

The Russians then began buying Brazilian sugar through a London brokerage firm.

Soldiers Work Despite Threat

BERLIN (UPI) — Seventeen soldiers who refused to work for 24 hours earlier this week showed up as usual today, despite their vow to strike if their demands were not met, the U.S. Army said.

A spokesman for the Army's Berlin command said all 80 soldiers in Battery C, 94th Artillery, took part in the unit's first formation today and then went to work.

Bankers Prepare For Gold Rush

By Ron Scherer
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

NEW YORK, N.Y. — American bankers and brokers see pay dirt in the gold bar.

The list of major banks and brokerage houses offering gold bullion or coins for sale on Dec. 31 is getting longer.

Others standing to profit from the 1975 gold rush are insurers, assayers, possibly a few department stores, and the major U.S. gold refiners. Buying gold may become as easy as signing a charge slip, or dealing with your local bank or broker.

Though gold may or may not rise astronomically in price once Americans are allowed to own it, investors have no doubt been watching as the shiny metal hits new highs on European markets. The price could near $200 per troy ounce by year end, according to some analysts, who predict sharply higher prices within the year.

Samuel Weiss, head of Samuel Weiss & Co., a New York Stock Exchange member and distributor of gold refined and fabricated by Engelhard Minerals & Chemicals, says on the first day of legal ownership Americans will buy up to $400 million worth of gold.

In another estimate, Henry J. Weisblatt, president of Mocatta Corp., a division of Mocatta Metals, the largest U.S. dealer in gold and silver bullion, says Americans will buy $4 billion worth of the metal in 1975.

The profit lure of this new line has drawn such banking institutions as Girard Bank in Philadelphia, Republic National Bank and Sterling National Bank in New York, First National Bank of Memphis, First National Bank of Maryland and First Amtenn, the holding company for six banks in Tennessee, Alabama, and southern Kentucky.

Close to announcing a plan are Bankers Trust in New York and Wells Fargo in California. Considering the direct sale of gold to the public, but with no concrete plans yet are First National City Bank, Chase Manhattan Bank and Morgan Guaranty Trust, all of New York. Several Southern banks are close to gold-selling announcements as well.

Although it is anticipated that most Americans will do their gold buying at banks, a substantial portion of the business will also be done by brokerage houses.

Merrill Lynch & Co., Ltd., will market gold in a joint venture with Samuel Montagu & Co., Ltd., and Handy & Harman, an American refiner. Merrill Lynch will offer the bars to both wholesale and retail clients. Drexel Burnham in New York also has a gold merchandising plan.

Bache & Co., Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis, Inc., and Reynolds Securities, Inc., will offer an open-ended fund that will invest in gold bullion and coins. The Chicago Mercantile Exchange, the New York Mercantile Exchange, and the Commodity Exchange will also trade in commodity futures contracts in gold.

Once Americans own gold they will have to store it. Most buyers will probably prefer to store it, since there is an additional charge of shipping, taxes, and insurance if delivery is made.

So substantial amounts of money can be made in the storage business, according to bank officials. New York's Citibank, through its correspondent banks and other clients, eventually hopes to store up to $2 billion worth of the metal in its new vault.

At a charge of $2 per 100 troy ounces of gold, this could mean a yearly income of $2.4 million for the large bank. The new vault will be given 24-hour-a-day guard protection.

Insurance companies likewise will benefit, since banks will probably pay extra premiums for the gold stored in their vaults, and investors may wish to buy extra insurance on their gold hoard. An insurance representative notes that the normal homeowner's policy will not insure gold hidden under a mattress.

Although some department store gold sales are possible, Seligman & Latz, operators of Finlay's Jewelry Stores and a chain of 600 beauty salons, says it has canceled plans to market the metal.

The major reason is simply competition. Department stores usually mark up items 30 to 50 per cent, and this would be impossible with banks selling gold at a mere 5 to 10 per cent premium over the London gold price. Department stores may, however, market some small gold pieces.

A major question that comes up with regard to the sale of gold is regulation. Currently, no federal agency watches over this major market. And there is no law establishing, for example, 24-karat gold as the standard vs. the cheaper 18-karat gold. In New York the attorney general's office is believed to be working on a gold bill, but will not comment on it.

Savings banks are also concerned that customer purchases of gold will result in an outflow of savings.

Civil Defense Program Must Stay At Vital Level On Lower Budget

By GUY HALVERSON
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. civil defense program, once an unquestioned cornerstone of the nation's overall defense effort, is a case study of how a military agency must grapple with inflation and congressional budget-cutting.

From a whopping $260 million back in 1951, the civil defense budget is pegged at $82 million for fiscal year 1975, down from a Pentagon request of $86.3 million.

Both education training and research programs have been trimmed. The 718 employees in the national civil defense office, the Civil Defense Preparedness Agency, must be whittled down to 653 by next summer.

Still, defense experts stress that the U.S. civil defense program, which combines programs involving possible military attack as well as civil defense programs for natural disasters, will be maintained at levels necessary to protect the public.

The agency is examining the current civil defense program against the effects of nuclear war. The program is based to a great extent on fallout shelters.

As part of this questioning the Civil Defense Preparedness Agency is moving ahead with study of a controversial new plan to relocate civilian populations in event of a crisis that might lead to nuclear war.

Although criticized by some congressmen, the agency is through the first phase of a study on relocation of populations. It is starting on a second phase, involving logistics, stockpiling of food, and other services.

While officials for the agency stress that the plan is only a study (a study that must yet be approved by John E. Davis, director of the agency, before going to Defense Secretary.

James R. Schlesinger), it is considered significant that the current issue of Foresight, the bimonthly magazine, of the preparedness agency, has a four-page article on relocation by Davis.

Moreover, Davis has on several occasions this year publicly referred to the new study, such as in speeches at Bournemouth, England, in June and at Brussels in October.

Schlesinger raised the issue of population relocation in a report to Congress last March.

The U.S. has identified some 226,000 buildings and other facilities that have space for shelters against radioactive fallout. It is estimated that perhaps as much as one-half the nation's population could be protected from fallout in these structures.

But the concern among some defense planners is whether the U.S. public might become "hostages" in a game of protracted nuclear "missile bargaining." The Soviet Union, according to some defense officials, has developed a relocation plan.

Thus some Pentagon officials, such as Schlesinger, are proposing that the U.S. study the feasibility of relocation, saving perhaps as many as 50 million to 60 million lives.

Some defense officials cite that although one-half the population lives in the 1,000 largest cities in the U.S.S.R., in the U.S. one-half the population lives in the 100 largest cities.

Critics, on the other hand, argue that to develop a relocation plan would be provocative and could dampen efforts toward detente. Moreover, critics question the motives behind the plan, as well as costs.

Guide Pamphlet Wins Praise Of Park Service

The National Park Service has given an award of excellence to a guide pamphlet published by a Point Reyes Station organization for use in Muir Woods National Monument.

Called "Redwood Creek Nature Trail," the 14-page booklet directs visitors on the monument's self-guiding nature trail.

It is put out by the Coastal Parks Association, a private group which works with the National Park Service. The service made the award, one of eight, in Denver last week at the culmination of competition among 60 associations which included pamphlets produced in the past two years.

It was written by Muir Woods naturalist Richard G. Danielsen and interpretive specialist Robert E. Jordan.

10-Year Energy Plan Proposed

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The European Common Market proposed a 10-year energy saving program for its nine membernations yesterday that it said would trim energy demands by 15 per cent and cut oil imports by $8 billion.

The 22-point program, drawn up by the Common Market's Executive Commission, will be debated by Energy ministers of the nine nations Dec. 17. Similar past programs by the commission have never been enacted by the ministers.

Arab Gesture Of Good Faith

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — An Arab investment group bought 15 per cent of the Arizona-Colorado Land and Cattle Co. as a "good faith" gesture in return for the firm's help in setting up agricultural enterprises for the Arabs.

Maurice McGill, vice president of finance for the firm, said the stock acquisition was made to assure the firm that the Arabs "won't hurt us in the Middle East."

The Arabs bought 500,000 shares in Arizona-Colorado last April for $9.2 million. The sale was arranged through a Luxembourg-based firm called Triad S.A.

Sledmakers Have Their Design-Season Secrets, Too

By DAVE LANGWORTHY
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

Hank Morton and his engineers usually like to make their design changes in late spring — in plenty of time for the new season, which begins in September and peaks in the months leading up to Christmas.

The innovations — a bumper modification here, more metal in the chassis — are safety oriented, and they are top secret. A security leak could mean loss of sales.

Morton does not work in Detroit for one of the Big Three automakers. His factory is in South Paris, Maine, and his product is sleds.

Those slatted snow vehicles with grand, stenciled Currier and Ives designs are still a big Christmas item in 1974. Industry spokesmen estimate that nearly 800,000 sleds will be sold this season, most of them to be tucked under Christmas trees.

But Currier and Ives would barely recognize 1974 models — the wooden slats are long gone, replaced by steel; the fancy stencils are not hand-drawn anymore.

"There isn't much way to dress up a sled, so most of the changes are made with safety in mind," Morton says. Some of the more recent changes are:

Removal of jagged edges on runners, once a major cause of sledding injuries.

Heavier bumpers at the front end for durability.

Heavier cleats on the underside to fasten runners more securely.

Snow-sled sales have grown at the unspectacular rate of 3 per cent annually since the 1930's according to Gerald Mayer, president of another manufacturer, the Gladding Corp., which makes about 60 per cent of all sleds sold in the United States. One of the reasons the growth rate in the industry has not been larger is the product itself — it's durable.

"I guess what we need for better growth is a little planned obsolescence," Mayer said. "Once someone buys a sled, it's good for life unless he outgrows it."

This year the industry expects to make a comeback of sorts, after a four-year sales dip. The 800,000 figure the industry is hoping for is up from 500,000 annually in the preceding four years.

Most sleds made in the United States are built in simple factories that produce furniture and other wood products. For example, the American Flyer and Speedaway plant in South Paris, which Morton runs, also manufactures dormitory furniture. It handles every phase of the sledbuilding process, from tree selection to final runner polishing.

The sleds are usually sold through retail stores in large lots, a practice that presents some safety problems. By the time the toys reach the consumers they are usually stripped of instructions.

But Morton has come up with a simple list of precautions:

All-important is the selection of the place where the sled is to be used. It should be a smooth hill that does not descend into a busy street or an obstruction, such as a fence or a wall. Morton suggests a golf course.

Children should be told how the sled works and then questioned to see that they understand thoroughly.

They should also be warned always to roll off the sled if a collision is unavoidable.

Police Chief To Be Named

UNION CITY (UPI) — The city council is expected to approve the appointment of William Kirkpatrick as Union City police chief, according to William Zaner, city manager.

Zaner said Wednesday he expected the council would act on the appointment Monday. Kirkpatrick, 43, has been deputy chief of the Gilroy Police Department.

The Union City position opened up with the Aug. 29 death of Police Chief William Cann, formerly of Novato. He was shot on June 11 during unrest over the shooting death of a suspected shoplifter, Alberto Terrones, 30, April 19.

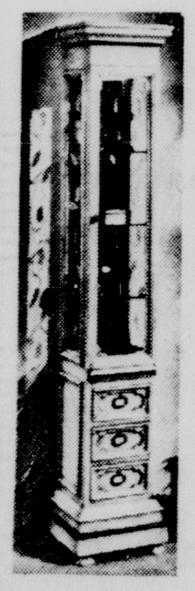

BART Walkway Repair Slated

OAKLAND (AP) — A concrete walkway that wiggled and wobbled as baseball fans crossed from a Bay Area Rapid Transit station to the Oakland Coliseum during last month's World Series needs $150,000 more structural work to keep it from swaying.

But neither BART nor the firm that designed the $900,000 walkway want to pay for it.

However, BART's engineering committee voted this week to proceed with the work and let an arbiter decide who should foot the bill.

Counseling Children Under Stress

CONFLICTS ACTED OUT — Dr. Anne Robertson prepares a doll house for child therapy session at Community Mental Health Services Office in San Rafael. A child, too young to verbalize problems, often illustrates conflicts at home through doll house play, giving child, psychologist and parents the clues they need to bring about a solution.

(Photo by Alfred Arn)

By PAT BALMES

"My mother died. It could happen to my dad, too. It could happen to me."

"I'm mad at my dad for going off and leaving us. If only he'd been more careful, he wouldn't have had that car accident."

"I think I saw my mother in a crowd; it was the same dress."

These are some typical thoughts of children in mourning.

If your husband or wife were to die, you would hardly be able to cope with your loss, much less guide your children through their emotional cirses.

At Marin Community Mental Health Services, psychiatrists, psychologists and social workers help children through the time of death or divorce.

A COUNSELOR talks privately with each child about his feelings, sometimes using a doll house to help little ones express fears, anger and guilt. The counselor offers understanding, explaining that other children have felt exactly as they are feeling. The counselor shares with the grieving parent what the child shares with her and teaches the parent how to respond to the child.

"We are here to help people and we really, really want to help," said Dr. Anne Robertson, MCMHS child advocate. "We try to help children cope with the stress of death or divorce and show them how to adjust."

IN DEATH, counseling helps the family accept their loss, express their feelings and adjust.

In divorce, counseling assists the family through the transition once the decision to end the marriage has been reached.

In both crises, counselors try to help the parent far enough along in adjustment so that he or she can attend to the child's needs. They also try to help children work through their emotional reactions.

AT MCMHS's four locations, San Rafael, Mill Valley, Point Reyes and Novato, counselors prefer to work with children immediately to prevent maladaptive behavior from becoming ingrained.

"IT IS NOT necessary to wait until signs of stress show," said Dr. Robertson. "The brief programs are preventive in nature."

Families are eligible is they apply within two months after the death or within four months after filing for dissolution of marriage. Families who do not meet these requirements may still have counseling under regular clinical arrangements.

Family members are counseled over four to eight weeks, usually individually but sometimes together.

THE SLIDING SCALE fee depends upon income and number in the family. For example, if a person earns $600 a month, with three people dependent upon that income, the monthly fee would be $5 a month covering the whole family.

"I applied for a staffing grant for these pilot preventative programs, which is awaiting appropriation and legislation. It would assure my primary goal to work at prevention," said the psychologist.

Services offered to children at the four offices are diagnosis, play therapy and group or family therapy. Direct crisis-intervention services are programs for death and divorce counseling, parent education, a developmental disability workshop for professionals and parents in January and a future parent education project for Single Mothers of Marin. Consultations with various other child-serving agencies are also offered.

"I FELL PARENTING is the world's hardest job, for which we have zilch training. So therefore I have put together a lot of skills that are helpful to parents," said Dr. Robertson.

In her parent education classes she uses small discussion groups, experiences and role playing. Parents learn child management skills, how to change the home environment so it is more productive for both parent and child. The classes put emphasis on how to communicate better, said the psycholgist who is the mother of four sons, ages 10 to 20.

She lives in Tiburon with her husband Thomas, a sculptor, who for 25 years was a state department foreign service officer. She studied psychology in the U.S. and abroad. A Marin resident for three years, Dr. Robertson divides her time between MCMHS and her private practice in San Rafael and Tiburon where she does child, family and adult psychotherapy.

HER FAVORITE approach is family therapy. When one part of the family system changes, it affects all parts, she belives. On the East Coast she did research with juvenile delinquents who changed beautifully, she said. But when they returned to their parents, they began their delinquent behavior again.

"We were successful when we tried a group that included parents and their kids. There must be a change in all parts of the system; it's the interaction that creates the trouble. Many problems, particularly in families, are ones of communication," she said.

SANTA PAYS A HOUSE CALL

Heather O'Connor, 5, of Tiburon, gets an early visit from Santa Claus, courtesy of the Peter Pan Chapter of the Children's Home Society. Santa Claus, played in this case by Robert Frick of Tiburon, will visit any Marin home on request at $4 a visit. Proceeds go to the Children's Home Society. For a visit from Santa, his bagful of candy canes and his attentive ear, residents should call chapter president Monica Casey of 1029 Lea Drive, San Rafael or project chairman Marlo Van der Zwiep of Novato.

'Toy Alert' Issued For Safe Yule Gifts

The Christmas shopping season is upon us, with its hustle and bustle, joy and frustration. The spirit of giving, particularly to the young, becomes a dominant part of our lives.

But there may be a spectre at the feast.

"Each year thousands of children in California are injured — some seriously — by unsafe toys," said State Health Director William E. Mayer, M.D.

"Approximately 150,000 toy-related injuries nationally were treated in hospital emergency rooms last year. Injuries included cuts and punctures, electrical shock and burns, chemical burns, and poisoning. In many cases, eyes were seriously damaged."

Mayer said some gifts are inappropriate, particularly for younger children. Some may be dangerous for any child.

To prevent injuries from toys, the State Department of Health, Department of Consumer Affairs and U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission will conduct a "Toy Alert" for the third consecutive year. It is intended to aid parents in choosing safe Christmas gifts for their children.

Mayer said his department's food and drug section is responsible for enforcing the California Hazardous Substances Act. This law was amended in 1972 to cover the labeling, manufacture, and sale of toys and other children's articles that may prove to be unsafe.

"The California law enables us to ban toys that have electrical, thermal, and mechanical hazards or those containing hazardous substances," he said.

"We can quarantine toys when there is probable cause to believe they are hazardous. Most retailers cooperate by voluntarily removing these articles from their shelves."

Mayer said state inspectors already are answering questions and responding to complaints about toys and other gifts. He said a pamphlet listing helpful hints for choosing toys, "For Kids' Sake," can be obtained from the department. Information on banned toys also is available.

Jorie Slates Interview Of Film Reviewer

Host Jorie Parr will present a mixed bag of interviews on her 9:30 a.m. Monday through Thursday program on KTIM next week.

Movie reviewer Sheila Benson of Mill Valley will discuss the films "Amarcord" and "Birds Do It . . . Bees Do It" on Monday.

On Tuesday, herbalist Nan Koehler of Novato will explain to listeners how to make a sleep pillow from herbs and will discuss homemade cosmetics.

James Dunn, artistic director of the Department of Theater Arts at the College of Marin, will be interviewed on Wednesday, discussing the musical "Horatio" which he directed for the American Conservatory Theater in San Francisco. The play is in the ACT repertory at the Geary Theater.

V. Phipps Wilson, "Bubbles" of Mad Sal's Ale House at the Dickens Christmas Fair in San Francisco, will be Thursday's guest. The actress-singer is a headliner at the fair which opened today.

Gestalt Therapy Discussions Set

Group discussions for single mothers and others interested in resolving internal conflicts through Gestalt therapy are scheduled at the Marin Young Women's Christian Association offices, 1618 Mission Avenue, San Rafael, Saturdays beginning Dec. 7.

The discussions will be held from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. for six Saturdays. A $1 fee will be charged at each meeting.

Barbara Goodrich, who holds a master's degree in social work, will be group leader.

The sessions are sponsored by the Single Mothers of Marin.

Male Volunteer Staffs Mill Valley League Shop

The first man to work as a volunteer staffer at the Family Service League Shop in Mill Valley is Peter Palmer, 46, of San Rafael.

Palmer, who calls himself "a professional volunteer", has a strong background in social work. He retired in 1965 as a senior case worker for the Marin County Department of Public Social Services. He was named chairman of the Marin Mental Health Advisory Board in 1969 and has been on the boards of the Planned Parenthood Association of Marin County, and the Family Service Agency of Marin.

His offer to work at the league thrift shop necessitated a minor organizational change, as league members quickly voted a nondiscriminatory membership clause into the by-laws. When Harry Bridges of Mill Valley, a customer of the family store, found Palmer behind the counter, he volunteered help.

Palmer is also the first male to become a docent for the Audubon Canyon Ranch. He thinks of the work of the salvage shop, which assists the Family Service Agency, as allied to that of the Audubon Society, citing recycling of used items as ecologically sound.

Half-Price Sale At Thrift Shop

The Marin General Hospital Volunteers Thrift Shop will hold a pre Christmas half-price sale Tuesday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The regular Christmas boutique will begin the following day, according to Mary Carpu, president of the Thrift Shop Branch.

The shop is located at 516 Irwin Street, San Rafael.

Babysitters Ready For Yule Shoppers

Pre-Christmas shoppers and afternoon partygoers in the Southern Marin area will be able to leave their small children in the hands of a group of teen-age babysitters who are raising money for a charity medical project.

Young people of the Marin Amigos de las Americas project will offer babysitting service at the Sausalito Nursery School, 654 Main Street, Sausalito, from noon until 5 p.m. Saturdays, Sundays and school vacation days beginning immediately through Dec. 23.

Parents of children over 3 may take advantage of the service.

A minimum donation of 85 cents per hour per child is suggested.

The service was undertaken as one of the fund raising projects of the 25 Marin young people who plan to go to South and Central American countries this summer to innoculate villagers against disease. They are attempting to raise $600 apiece toward their trip.

Lorrie Norby, publicity chairman for the Amigos, said reservations at the baby sitting center will not be necessary, but that information may be obtained from Nancy Dakin of Kentfield, Dave Ballard of Ross or Ann Shackelford of Strawberry.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

A Reader Offers Additional Information About Weddings

DEAR HELEN:

I found "Researcher's" letter on the origins of weddings interesting, but she may be surprised to know that many traditions began way back BEFORE women began to be regarded as chattels.

Monogamy started because it was the most efficient way to produce lots of babies. This was not meant to "enslave" women, but rather it was necessary, to keep the tribe going. Infant and child mortality was very high a thousand years or more ago.

A male professor of mine holds the theory that back in pagan times, people didn't understand much about reproduction. Therefore, males held females in awe — as people with a "divine" power of creation.

Males were considered expendable: perhaps men were sent off to war not because they were stronger, but because they were less important than the "regenerating" women.

Most wedding customs are linked with fertility, not "capture" of female by male. Flowers and the color white denote rebirth, white being considered a miracle color that was supposed to start the life cycle.

The reason for community attendance at a wedding was to encourage others to become involved in the fertility process. Again, the more important males are in any tradition, the newer the tradition: male importance tying in with male knowledge of fertility.

The reason for a religious ceremony was so that the priest (or other) would throw in a fix, to get the "getting-together" to work.

I must debate "Researcher" on some of her bases for newer customs. In ancient Rome, lovers exchanged rings (usually of gold) and wore them on the left third finger because a vein or nerve was thought to run from that finger to the heart. A bride was carried over the threshold so that she couldn't trip on it — tripping being a bad omen for the mistress of the house.

Many wedding traditions go back to long before our terms "good" and "bad" could apply. Purity was not as important as propagation of the race, in those days. Nevertheless our marriage customs will stay with us — our roots are too deep to eradicate them, even though "unlimited fertility" is the least thing we want these days. — MISTRESS K.D.P.

DEAR HELEN:

To a woman facing breast cancer surgery, the most frightening thing is "What comes afterward?" — "What must I fear?" — "How will I look?" — "How will my husband react?"

"Reach to Recovery" volunteers will help her answer these questions. It is an organization founded by Terese Lasser, who underwent a mastectomy 22 years ago, and it now includes some 8,500 trained women who are ready to visit cancer patients, offering advice, encouragement, hope, and practical guidance on everything from arm exercises to wearing apparel, to psychological hangups.

Today, "Reach to Recovery" has become an integral part of the American Cancer Society, and its workers are available throughout the world.

Their services are free — a woman need only tell her doctor she'd like to talk to someone who has been through it herself — and their candid discussions of all nonmedical problems can be the turning point on a patient's road to recovery.

Hope you'll tell your readers about "Reach to Recovery," Helen. — F.K.

DEAR F.:

Thanks to you — I have. — H.

SEW SIMPLE

On Making Fringed Wool Scarf For Cold Weather

By Eunice Farmer
Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate

DEAR EUNICE,

With the very long scarves that are worn today, how can we make them ourselves? The ready-made ones seem to have finished edges and the fringe is actually the fabric. — MRS. J.H.T.

DEAR MRS. J.H.T.,

The method you would use depends entirely on the fabric. You will not be able to achieve the finished edges you find on some scarves which have been woven for this effect in the narrow widths.

I have looked into many of the scarves and find that lots of them are made of wool. The edges on the long sides have been overcast, then folded over in a quarter-inch single fold (not doubled to hide the raw edge) and finally machine stitched flat near the edge. In tweeds and textured fabrics this will never show.

As for the ends, you may have to finish them the same way; however, experiment with fringing the fabric first.

Some wools fringe beautifully, often in the most unexpected colors, depending on the direction of the colors. If you can fringe the ends, fringe about 2, 3 or 4 inches. It is not necessary to machine stitch at the end of your fringe — the threads will never pull out that far up.

If the fabric doesn't fringe well, finish the edge the same as the sides. Purchase yarn in the same colors as the fabric. You may use two or three colors. Separate the yarns, take about four to eight lengths together, twice the finished length of the fringe, loop them through the fabric and tie in a single knot. Any yarn shop will show you how this is done. A scarf can give a couture look to any garment this fall. Try it — they're fun to make.

DEAR EUNICE,

A recent pattern I purchased was to be used for stretch knits only. The style was very simple, with elastic at the waistline. The point that baffled me was the fact that they suggested a full length zipper from the neckline down through the elastic casing. Since the dress has slightly blouson appearance, it seems the zipper would be stiff and ruin the lines of the dress. Why is a full length zipper necessary in the knit fabric? — CAROLYN H.

DEAR CAROLYN,

You have a good point, and quite frankly, I see no reason for the zipper through the elastic casing. Of course you must realize that there are many types of knits. The stabilized or warp knits have no horizontal stretch, therefore it would probably be impossible to pull on and off without the zipper opening.

If your knit is the stretch type, try using a 12 inch zipper for the upper bodice area and then put the dress on. If it works without further opening, you may eliminate this step. It all depends on the stretch of the fabric and your own body. Do whatever seems to work best for you.

DEAR EUNICE,

I bought some ultra suede for a coat and have read all your previous notes on handling this fabric. I feel fairly confident, but am unsure about the buttonholes. You mentioned that there are several ways to make them. Since I want my coat to look professional, please review them again. — MRS. T.W.

DEAR MRS. T.W.,

I have checked all the garments that are made in ultra suede by the leading designers and manufacturers, and there are several variations, any of which would be acceptable.

First, if you are a perfectionist, you could make a beautifully tailored bound buttonhole. This would be my first choice in a coat. However, remember this is personal preference.

Many garments have machine made buttonholes. These, too, are acceptable provided they are well made. All machines don't do an adequate job, so I would suggest trying a sample first before you make your final decision.

The last method, and the most popular with the largest distributor and designer of ultra suede garments, is to simply machine stitch through the facing and the top layer of the garment the exact rectangular shape of a buttonhole. Keep the rows of stitching fairly close together, no more than ¼ inch. After the machine stitching is completed, slash the center of the buttonhole. Since ultra suede doesn't ravel, the raw edges can remain unfinished.

Keeping School Children Healthy

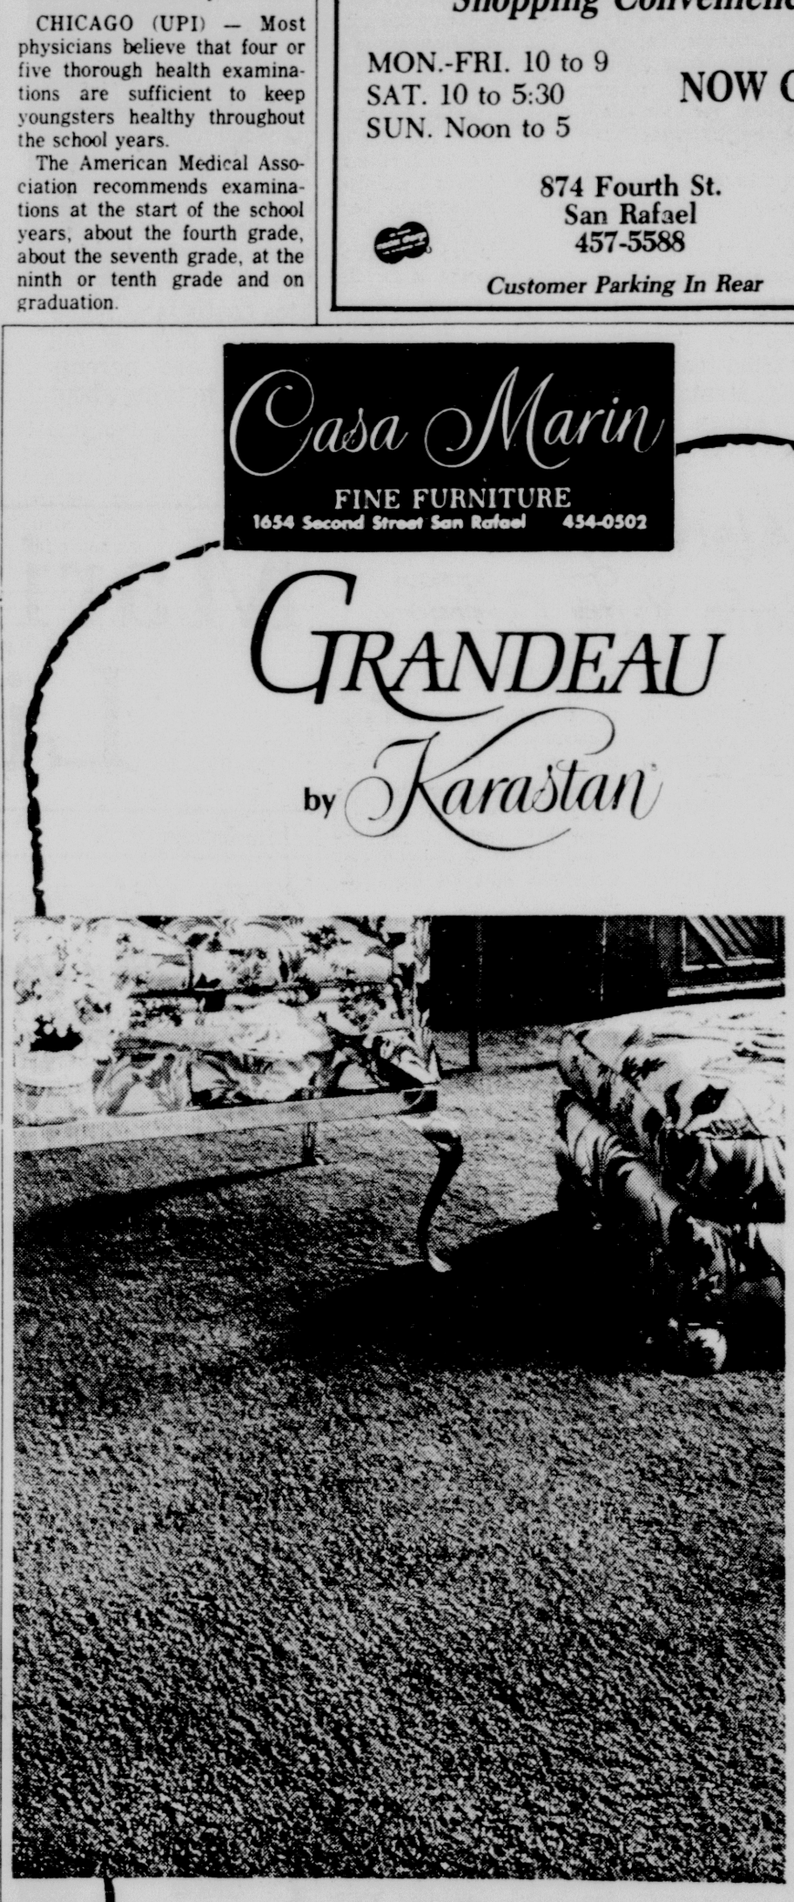

CHICAGO (UPI) — Most physicians believe that four or five thorough health examinations are sufficient to keep youngsters healthy throughout the school years.

The American Medical Association recommends examinations at the start of the school years, about the fourth grade, about the seventh grade, at the ninth or tenth grade and on graduation.

Confronting Barrier Of Local Language

By CYNTHIA PARSONS
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

Every year about 5 million children whose native language is Spanish (or some colloquial form of Spanish) enter United States public schools. A lesser number of Italian-speaking children enter German schools. A significant proportion of the children going to school for the first time in many Asian countries speak Chinese and not the local language.

A serious academic question centers about what is the best way to educate these children, especially those who are not fluent in the local language and whose parents do not speak, read or write the local language.

Children of Italian migrant parents who must attend German schools experience quite the same difficulty as the children of Mexican parents who have migrated to Texas.

IN MALAYSIA, there are three "official" school languages. One is Malay, one is Chinese, the third is Temel. In the early grades, usually up to grade three, for example, Temel-speaking children are taught in Temel. Malay is taught as a "second" or "foreign" language. But by grade four, Malay is the official school language until the higher grades when fluency in English is required.

When I visited a Malaysian school near Kuala Lumpur, I found teachers who were quadrilingual; they spoke Chinese, Malay, Temel and English and appeared to know all four well enough to use them in teaching.

I WAS TOLD that the little ones just coming to school were encouraged to converse in their native language; but from the very first day were taught Malay. What seemed most important was that no stigma was attached to speaking another language.

In Germany, as in the United States, the tendency has been to demand that children speak, read and write only German (or English in the United States), that they not be allowed to use their native language in school.

Picture the little Spanish-speaking child coming to an American school for the first time. He's heard English, of course. But his family and neighborhood speak a colloquial Spanish.

IT IS LIKELY that teachers in the school speak no Spanish. They cannot communicate in a natural way with these pupils. Immediately, a formal relationship develops as the five and six-year-olds try to converse in English and the teachers find that directions aren't followed because of the language barrier.

Some experts say that, painful as this process is for the child, it is the best way to educate children in the official language of the country.

These scholars argue that the longer a child spends speaking a second language, the more difficult it is for him to learn the primary language. Some linguists insist that only a radical language program at school will break the "bad" language habits taught at home.

THESE THEORIES are not supported by the education-language program in Malaysia and several other Asian nations.

Another group of experts argues that a child needs all the comfort and personal dignity he can get making the transition from five or six years at home speaking another language and living in another culture, and that the schools must ease these little ones into the national language.

They argue that it would be well to treat these children as both bilingual and bicultural. They add that the schools must operate in both languages and accommodate native cultural differences so the children do not feel alienated and hence fail to learn.

IN OTHER WORDS, the 5 million to 6 million Spanish-speaking primary schoolchildren in the United States should be allowed to speak their native Spanish and be taught by bilingual teachers who give them lessons in both Spanish and English, thus gently easing them into an all-English academic program.

What does educational research show? While not definitive, its indications are that schools that allow pupils to speak their native language in the primary grades and have teachers who can converse in this language have fewer dropouts than schools that insist on a single language from day one.

LONG AGO the Los Angeles public school system came to the conclusion that, as far as possible, each child should have a teacher who can converse with him in his native language as well as teach him in English.

School districts that don't have sufficient numbers of bilingual certified teachers hire classroom aides who are bilingual. These persons are used as in-school tutors.

A few school districts ask for parent volunteers to come to school and work with non-English-speaking children.

How best to teach non-native-speaking children is a serious academic problem. It's a worldwide problem. If those educators who advocate a bilingual bicultural approach are correct, then hundreds of schools are using thousands of inadequately trained teachers.

Battle Of Sexes Play Due At Fund Raising Dinner

"Adam and Even," a play that takes a wry and thoughtful view of the battle between the sexes, will be presented at a fund raising dinner for Woman's Way Dec. 14 at the Sausalito Cruising Club.

Cocktails will be served at 6:30 p.m., dinner at 7 p.m., followed by the play at 8:30 p.m.

Written by Elizabeth Blake, "Adam and Even" was commissioned by the General Electric foundation and produced by Elizabeth Barrymore Cole of New York. It will be performed by the Northern Area Repertory Company of Plays for Living, directed by John Brebner of San Rafael.

The play presents a modern problem, that of an office manager who begins to fall apart when the personnel department of his company suggest that his long time, devoted and highly qualified secretary is the most qualified applicant for the position of head buyer in his department. Seeking sympathy from his wife he is confronted with her desire to start teaching full time at a university. Within an eight hour day his life is potentially altered, and he is forced to examine his own feelings about professional women and his relationship to them.

Tickets for the event are available at Woman's Way, 412 Red Hill Avenue in San Anselmo.

Woman's Way is a non profit organization serving the women of Marin.

Public May Audition For Roles In 'Hamlet'

The general public will have a chance to audition for roles in the upcoming College of Marin production of "Hamlet" in tryouts scheduled Dec. 9 at 7 p.m. in Theater III in San Anselmo.

Persons awarded parts will be enrolled in adult education drama classes at the college.

Men seeking roles should memorize and give a speech of two minutes or less from the play. Women should have ready a similar segment from either Ophelia's or Gertrude's speeches.

Callbacks will be at 7 p.m. Dec. 16 at Theater III. Rehearsals will begin Jan. 13. The play will be given 17 times from Feb. 14 through March 8.

The role of Hamlet is not open for auditions. The college is negotiating with professional actor David Dukes, former COM student, for the part, Dunn said.

Scripts are on reserve at the college library.

Radio To Feature College Of Marin

College of Marin will be among three colleges featured on the "Community College Report" program on radio KRON-FM at 9:30 p.m. tomorrow and repeated at 10:30 a.m. Monday.

The program, produced by the station and the California Community College Association, will bring on-the-spot reports of developments at the Kentfield campus, Solano Community College and Foothill College.

Dollar Estate Rental Fees To Be Studied

A schedule of fees for rental of the Robert Dollar estate in San Rafael will be considered by the San Rafael City Council at 8 p.m. Monday in city hall.

At issue are minimal fees covering use of facilities at the historic mansion. San Rafael voters recently voted overwhelmingly to tax themselves to buy the estate as a cultural center.

Councilmen will also discuss abatement of illegal signs in the city, consider closing Old Lucas Valley Road, and hear a report on Proposition 9 by City Atty. Fred C. Robbins.

The council will also consider a request by Roger F. Byars of 217 Jewell Street that he be allowed to keep two goats in his yard. The planning commission has denied the request.

ART REVIEW

Polish History Depicted In Alemany Library Show

By ADA GARFINKEL

A varied display of Polish folk art highlights the current exhibit in Alemany Library on the Dominican College campus, while the gestural paintings of Bay Area artist Michael Kennedy occupy the walls of San Marco Gallery.

Religious, pagan, formal, and primitive influences encompassing 1,000 years of Polish history and culture are represented in numerous media and materials, and in designations of fine art, decorative art, and functional artifacts.

Many of the icons, medallions, and small sculptures are originals. Other items — replicas of the breastplates worn in battle, the Coronation Sword, and the precise miniature paintings on ivory — are by contemporary Polish artists anxious to keep alive the heritage of their country.

The cameo portraits of Polish heroes, statesmen, scientists, musicians, writers, and poets — men and women — include Pulaski and Kosciuszko who fought in the American Revolutionary War.

Crudely fashioned pastoral scenes, replicas of medieval knights in full battle regalia, the "black Madonna" plaque from a famous painting of 1382, nobility in resplendent court dress in a sprightly polonaise, and a cossack mounted on a rooster are other unusual items.

A creche covered with tin-foil from candy wrappings depicts the prevalent Gothic architecture of Krakow, the former capitol of Poland, and still an important religious and cultural center which celebrated its millenium in 1966.

Also included are tapestries, paintings on paper by contemporary artists, decorative boxes, jewelry, laces, and glassware.

The exhibit is sponsored by the Polish Arts and Culture Foundation, a private organization with offices in San Rafael, and will remain in Alemany Library through Jan. 31. Viewing hours are daily from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

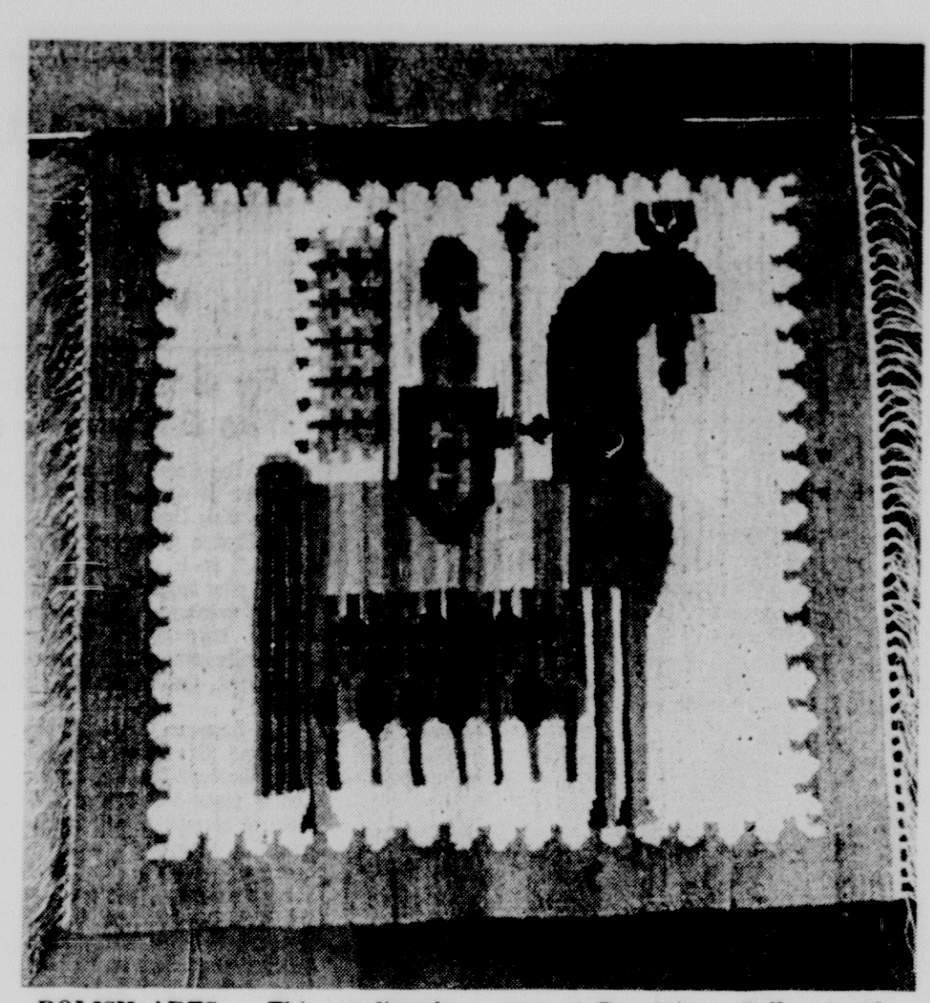

Michael Kennedy's uniformly-sized acrylic paintings on paper in San Marco Gallery are, at first glance, deceptively simple and childlike. Yet the exuberant caligraphy of his animated brushwork and his wet-into-wet color modulations achieved by mixing his colors directly on the painting yield unexpected and surprisingly rich painterly results. And their enshrinement within wrap-around plastic frames adds an aura of preciousness in keeping with their opalescent and jewel-tone colors.

Most of Kennedy's paintings feature a small rectangle or cube above a larger one either centered or off-center on an otherwise completely painted ground. It is within the rectangles that the artist relives joyful and momentous experiences — spiritual, sensual, frightening, or buoyant. And structurally, the rectangles provide a formal balance of light and space to the broad color fields.

Each of Kennedy's paintings is dominated by a strong color — orange, green, purple, yellow, red, or blue, and all eight were painted within the last two years. "Life in San Bruno" — the earliest — on a bright yellow field discloses the freshness of a spring morning through an open doorway as a young child would experience it directly in paint.

Somber russet, violet, deep orange, and ochre on a field of blue, flying objects in the lower square and architectural destruction in the upper one, give rise to speculation on the nature of the disaster in "Shadow and the Act."

And a viscerally sensuous response to nature appears to be the theme of "Revelation Suite No. 16." This one, on a predominantly rich purple field, features a sparkling, blue-green scenic night view in the upper square and an opalescent jade and mauve flow of color in the lower one.

POLISH ARTS — This medieval knight on horseback is one of the designs on a group of hand-woven tapestry "paintings" featured in an exhibit of contemporary and historical folk art from Poland now at Dominican College's Alemany Library. A show of paintings by Bay Area artist, Michael Kennedy, is simultaneously on display in San Marco Gallery.

This show which is on loan from the Triangle Gallery in San Francisco, will continue through Dec. 14, and may be seen daily from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Marin Dining And Wining

ONCE A COFFEE SHOP — This dining section is now part of Dionysis, a cozy little restaurant in Tiburon serving the traditional dishes of Greece. Dionysis was the Greek god of wine and the dining room features bottles, jugs and casks as part of the decor — as at the right where Despina Bournazos makes a selection from one of the racks.

DINING OUT AND INNS

By HARRY CRAFT

For Good Greek Dinners, It's The Dionysis In Cove Center

Trust the Greeks to have a word for it — in fact, two words: "Kale Orece."

The French would say "Bon Appetit." It is, of course, a toast to your appreciation of the meal of which you are about to partake. Here in America we are usually somewhat less poetic about it, settling for "Good Eating."

If it happens that skillfully prepared Greek food is at stake, the words are well taken. And a place where they will seem to be particularly appropriate is Dionysis, down Tiburon way — a little restaurant I have previously mentioned in this column, but one that I should have given high praises to months ago. As it is, it's been open a year and I just got around to partaking last week. My loss.

Dionysis is the type of place you might pass right by unless you were looking for it. There is no highway visibility, for it's in the Cove Shopping Center at Tiburon Boulevard and Blackfield Drive. Peter and Despina Bournazos operated a coffee shop at the same location for several years — then converted it to a dining house. For anyone as good and as skilled a specialty chef as Peter is I can see that a simple coffee shop could be frustrating. Now there is no counter and the restaurant has been cleverly decorated with wine casks and bottles and brick, creating an atmosphere to match the food.

Dinners are served from 5 to 10 p.m. and the restaurant is closed on Mondays. The dinner menu is about two-thirds traditionally Greek, and features such Hellenic entrees as mousaka, pastitsio, dolmades, shiskabob, a combination plate, Greek style lamb chops and pork chops and a chef's special. Also available are a steak plate, fried oysters, prawns and a combination seafood plate. Prices are $4.25-$6.75 including soup and salad. For dessert there is baklava with its 75 paper thin layers, kataifa and galactobureko. Despina does the baking.

Wine list offers Greek and other imported wines (including some Greek wines that are not retsina) and a nice selection of California labels and a good house wine. There is also the specially blended and individually brewed cup of Greek coffee.

Lunches feature several of the Greek dishes at $4.50-$4.95 including soup or salad, a number of sandwiches and breakfast selections — omelets, French toast, steak and eggs.

Weekend dinners at Dionysis can be very busy and it would be well to make reservations. As with many dinner houses the middle of the week is less crowded and reservations would not be necessary — unless you are considering having a group dinner.

VICTORIA STATION, an eating complex composed of a simulated railway depot flanked on three sides by six freight cars (one a cocktail lounge), may be scheduled to open by Christmas, but from all appearances at this stage I shouldn't be surprised if the train were late. My guess would be the first of the year or later.

The complex is located on East Sir Francis Drake Boulevard in Greenbrae, hard by the underpass crossing below Highway 101. Although workmen were almost frantically busy when I looked at it this week, a heavy December rainstorm before the parking area is leveled and paved could change the whole timetable.

Undoubtedly the restaurant will prove to be a fascination and many people will visit it out of curiosity as well as for the Victoria Station reputation for a simple menu but good food. Prime rib is the big menu favorite — probably because it is prominently and temptingly displayed, forcing diners' juices to run just looking at it. Other favorites are steaks and shrimp.

The first Victoria Station was built in San Francisco in 1969. There are now about 30 throughout the country and plans for international expansion are in the works.

THIS SEEMS TO BE a day for corrections:

The liquor license for which an application has been made by Chez Pierre in San Anselmo is not that of Agatha's Pub in Sausalito — but the one used by J and P Chicage, formerly located at the same address, 621 Bridgeway. Agatha's still maintains its full on sale general license.

Incidentally this is a place that specializes in omelets, hamburgers, all types of sandwiches and salads. Service is from 11 a.m. to 2 a.m.

And I am indebted to Mrs. B. Lytle of Larkspur for the information that Hendersons' restaurant is not located where the Embers used to be in Corte Madera. This building was torn down. Henderson's is nearby but not at the corner of Redwood and Corte Madera Avenue. Actual address is 60 Corte Madera Avenue (the extension of Larkspur's Magnolia Avenue).

SAM'S ANCHOR CAFE in Tiburon has a new "Blue Room" — a cozy little area decorated with rustic cedar walls and furnished with blue deck chairs. In a way it is a restaurant within a restaurant, for its principal purpose is to feature a popular priced menu for the budget conscious. Most dishes are listed at $2.95 or less on a blackboard. Regular items are mushroom, crab and Spanish omelets, casserole dishes, soups, a daily special such as a chicken or veal dish, plus antipasto, pasta and special side dishes, along with sandwiches and salads. Service will be from 6 to 10 p.m.

It also boasts its own bar, two color television sets for football and special events and an excellent view of Tiburon Harbor, Angel Island and the San Francisco skyline.

Sam's regular lunch and dinner menus will continue to be served in the main dining room, and of course you can still eat on the outside deck in good weather amid the squawking gulls who steal bread crumbs and leftovers from almost under your nose.

Actually the place hasn't changed much over 50 and some odd years. It was opened at a time when Tiburon was a bustling railroad town with a good measure of hard drinking workmen. During the prohibition period it was a speakeasy and stop-off for ocean going rum runners.

Its clientele is more savory now and includes a lot of headline names — but Sam's is weatherworn, the paint is peeling and certain oldtimers who still go there remember the good (?) old days —they behave themselves now.

If you pick this place as one where you want to eat and run — you can't. Some of the waiters have been around two score years and don't look kindly on being given a rush act. Eat, take your time and look at the view — that's what it is there for.

Open seven days a week throughout the year (except on Christmas). The bar opens at 10 a.m., with breakfast and lunch served from 11 a.m. On Saturdays and Sundays everything starts at 9 a.m.

Fairfax Council

The Fairfax Town Council will meet at 8 p.m. Monday at the Fairfax Women's Club to discuss the 1974 Housing and Community Development Act, according to the town administration.

Romania Won't Be A Satellite

BUCHAREST (UPI) — The Romanian Communist Party ended its 11th congress yesterday by approving a 175-page charter rejecting Soviet satellite status and calling for a new Communist world order based on equal party rights.

The 25-year party program was unanimously passed by the 2,500 delegates at the four-day conclave, which also re-elected Nicolae Ceausescu to another five-year term as president.

"It is no longer possible to have a center which has the intention of coordinating the activities of the Communist parties," the new charter said.

"The Romanian Communist party believes everything has to be done to achieve a new type of unity in the international Communist movement, based on the equality and respect for the independence of each party."

In addition to confirming Ceausescu's determination to resist outside interference in Romania's domestic and foreign policies, the charter lays down very ambitious targets for industrial and economic development.

Diplomats said these goals could only be achieved by continuing to keep the country on very tight rein, squeezing the Romanian consumer and public spending in order to build up the nations industrial base.

Such policies have earned Romania the reputation as the most Stalinist nation in East Europe and led to a drop in Ceausescu's personal popularity.

Independent Police Probes Said Not Ruled Out Under New Law

A new law which will require police agencies to establish their own procedures for handling citizens' complaints will not preclude independent investigations by other agencies such as the human rights commission, the Marin County counsel's office has advised.

"It should be clear that under existing laws and the prospective application (of the new law in January) that citizen complaints against police agencies can be investigated by a multitude of agencies," Thomas G. Hendricks, deputy county counsel wrote.

Besides the rights commission, the Grand Jury and the Criminal-Justice Planning Agency, among others, can investigate, he said.

Hendrick's opinion will be considered Tuesday by county supervisors as they review a proposed grievance procedure for the sheriff's office.

That procedure, drafted by Bella Aaron, director of the Criminal-Justice Planning Agency, says complaints against the sheriff's force will be referred first to the sheriff.

If not satisfied with the sheriff's handling of the matter, the complainant will be advised to file the complaint with Mrs. Aaron's office.

The complainant then will be notified of any action taken by the sheriff or the Criminal-Justice Planning Agency in resolving the grievance.

Hendricks said he approved of the procedure but added that it can not be used to block other agencies from making independent investigations.

He said that while the board can not tell the elected sheriff what procedures he should use, it can set up a separate grievance review policy of its own.

LONDON (UPI) — Five Northern Irishmen charged with murder in last week's Birmingham pub bombings that killed 20 have been beaten up in prison, apparently by fellow prisoners, British newspapers said today.

The five appeared in magistrate's court yesterday with black eyes, cuts and bruises.

EMPTY TOWER — The John Hancock tower in Boston, plagued by the problem of broken glass, which prevented its occupation is getting a full new complement of windows at a cost of $6 million.

John Hancock Tower Is Getting New Glass

By STEPHEN WEBBE
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

BOSTON — The soaring skyscraper is cold and empty. It might have been abandoned by a waning civilization: dust coats its bleak, unfinished corridors, and construction gear litters its floors.

Truculent winds buffet plywood panels replacing much of its gleaming glass facade that began to crack and plunge earthward three years ago, a problem that has prevented occupation of the $105-million building to this day.

By night the 60-story John Hancock Mutural Life Insurance Co. tower in Boston broods over the city like the sinister black monolith from the movie "2001."

By day its mottled plywood and glass surface gives it the appearance of a gigantic cubist folly, a Piet Mondrian in windows and wood.

At long last, however, the plywood is beginning to come down, and new, specially designed glass panels are going into place.

But why did it lose so much glass that all of the 10,344 panels of glass are being replaced, at an estimated cost of $6 million?

The story began in 1967, when the company announced plans to put up a new home-office building on its parking lot adjoining Copley Square, where Henry Hobson Richardson's Romanesque Trinity Church vies for attention with the Florentine grandeur of the Boston Public Library.

Appreciating that the sensitive nature of the site called for a structure whose appearance would belie its bulk, architect Henry N. Cobb felt the solution was a diagonally-placed thomboid tower sheathed in irridescent glass, with a notch at either end to assert "verticality and tautness."

While the shape of the building and its novel position helped disguise its size, it was the 13½ acres of glass — mirroring surrounding buildings in impressionistic splotches of light and shade — that Cobb relied on to eliminate its scale altogether. But far from diverting attention, the glass was soon to attract it.

According to Albert E. Prouty, who was then in charge of John Hancock's home-office building program, the first breakages were reported on Aug. 3, 1971, when six planes or lights of the reflective, double-glazed glass were broken. From then until August, 1972, an additional 220 broke. This figure included those which cracked in cases stored in the building.

By December, 1972, an additional 357 lights of the Thermopane glass had broken. On Jan. 20, 1973, wind gusts up to 75 m.p.h. played havoc with the tower, breaking 65 more lights of glass.

As the glass fell out or was removed, plywood began to go up in its place until 300,000 square feet sheathed the building, giving it a coppery sheen in the sunlight — at least until the Boston Fire Department requested the wood be coated in a black, fire-retardant paint.

On Oct. 10, 1973, Prouty announced that all 10,344 Thermopanes in the tower would be replaced with a reflective tempered glass.

"The cost of reglazing the tower will be approximately $6 million," officials affirm.

So what went wrong? Dr. Robert J. Hansen, Cambridge consultant, once ventured that "either the loads are too great or the glass is too weak, or some combination of the two."

Richard Martin, vice president of the Gilbane Construction Co., claims the corners of the tower acted like air foils, creating a partial vacuum on the exterior surface of the glass, which was then pushed out by the higher pressure inside.

To the great relief of the John Hancock Company, none of the new glass is showing any tendency to leave the building. Publicly, officials stress that the company's great desire is to avoid reciminations and finish the job.

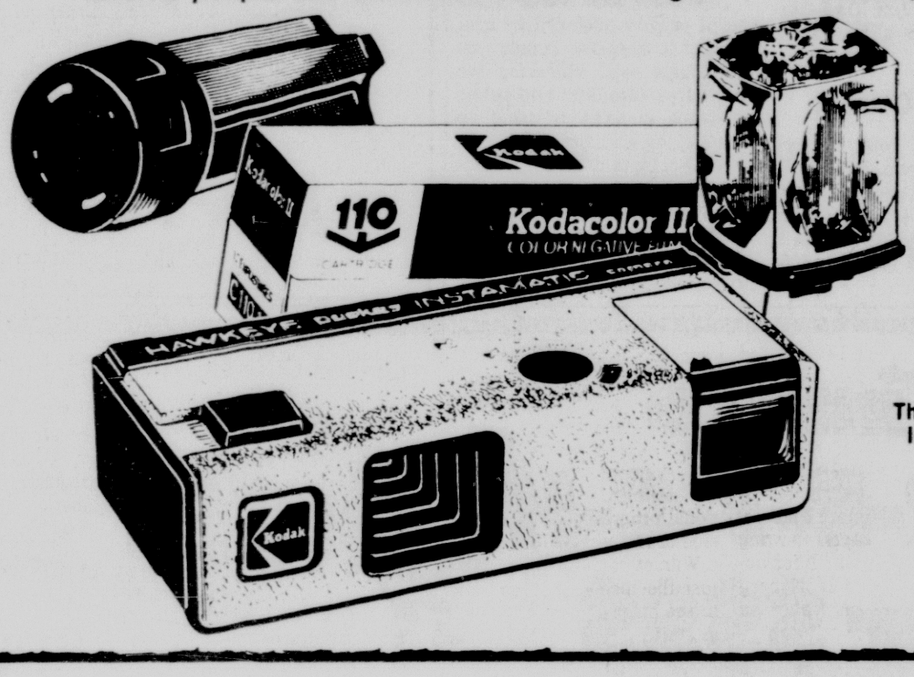

But a lawyer for one of the contractors predicts that next year "John Hancock is going to be suing everybody in sight."

Jogging The Jailed Minds

ROY WILMOT
Teacher of the jailed

By JEFF GREER

Teacher Roy Wilmot brings an armful of drama scripts into the echoing, noisy concrete and stainless steel cave that is the mess hall of the Marin County Jail.

He passes the scripts around to his reading class.

Men who have difficulty puzzling out the wording on questionnaires they fill out for probation reports, find themselves engrossed in reading aloud from Ken Kesey's "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest."

Or perhaps the script for the day is Vonnegut's far-out "Happy Birthday, Wanda June."

The play readings are only one of the low-key, unorthodox techniques Wilmot uses as teacher of the jailed. His pupils vary from men who really cannot read — but won't admit it to anyone — to college graduates who devour a book or more a day to pass the otherwise deadly dull time in jail.

The students all have one thing in common, though — Wilmot usually has only a few weeks or months to work with them, before they leave the jail.

Silmot launched his jail school in March as an experiment proposed by the Marin County Schools Department, with the aid of Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos, the county probation department, and antidrug agencies, the teacher explained.

By June, the county board of education decided the education experiment should be a permanent program.

Wilmot, so far, is the entire staff of the school atop the north end of the Marin Civic Center.

By no means all jail inmates take advantage of his teaching, Wilmot reported. But those who want to learn, get a series of tests to find their aptitudes, educational level, and fields were instruction is most needed.

Wilmot often circulates through the jail cells, announcing that "this week we're going to have a go at math," or another topic.

Some take him up on his offer; others prefer to play cards, read or "watch the boob tube," the teacher said.

Many of his students are those who failed to earn a high school diploma. Wilmot prepares them for the widely known General Educational Development (GED) examination — its passage earns the equivalent of a high school diploma and is useful in getting a job or entering college, he explained.

Since March, 12 jail inmates have passed their GED test.

It's no magic key to staying out of jail, Wilmot frankly admits.

"So far three are back and one's still running," he said. "I think some of the men in jail get totally bored with living straight outside. They're mostly in their 20s; the ones in their 30s seem to be changing," the teacher said.

"The education thing is an attempt to bring some other focus into their life. The GED course is a natural — it's entirely goal oriented" and can be accomplished in the relatively short time the inmate is in the jail, Wilmot explained.

A larger-scaled teaching program is offered at the county honor farm, where the inmate turnover is less rapid. That program, operated by the probation department, involves several educational specialists and counselors, Wilmot said.

A grant also is in the offing for setting up a special educational program for the women's side of the county jail.

Wilmot is busy enough with just the men's side, and hopes to see his program get additional staff.

Most classes are in the afternoon now, but Wilmot said he's leaning toward concentrating on evening sessions because there's less competition from other distractions then.

"In the morning, they want to go back to sleep after breakfast. In the afternoon, there's a line of people — attorneys and family and friends — wanting to talk to the men," Wilmot said.

Wilmot, 35, grew up in New York City, earned a master's degree in theology and taught in New York and Connecticut before he "got upset with the academic pattern" of scholarly research and writing needed to get ahead.

He said shifting to another field "without extensive reeducation" seemed impossible until he took advantage of VISTA. (Volunteers in Service to America).

Wilmot taught for VISTA in the Oakland Street Academy and in the San Mateo County Jail in Redwood City before he was hired for the Marin County job. The jail school program was devised by Gene Turtle, administrative assistant to Virgil S. Hollis, county schools superintendent.

Wilmot's program in the jail constantly is changing, though it concentrates on remedial reading, English and mathematics.

He also circulates daily with a cart through the jail operating a paperback book lending library backed by such groups as Friends of the Library.

"That's a really good way for me to deal with 100 inmates at a time," and helps recruit students for more direct studying, he said. Probation officials also talk up his classes to their cases, he reported.

Wilmot also has arranged for College of Marin counselors to visit the jail and talk about the campus.

The counselor "talked to about 50 guys" during the summer, "about 20 went out there" after being released, and "three or four are still there," Wilmot said.

Some honor farm inmates are allowed regularly to attend classes at the college, he added.

Undersheriff Sidney Stinson said Wilmot's unusual school is "really great" despite the handicaps of its makeshift classroom, and the rapid pupil turnover.

"It's a shame we don't have a better classroom, but Wilmot's really accomplishing things," Stinson commented. "He's getting men through that GED test — I'm not sure I could pass that test myself."

STUDYING IN AJIL — Barefooted students, mostly clad in Marin County Jail coveralls, perch on the cold stainless steel seats and tables of the jail mess hall to study with teacher Roy Wilmot (in background). Size of the class varies daily, as new students volunteer and old ones leave jail or simply drop out of class. Jail authorities say they wish better classroom facilities were available. Bright Sun, Laden Tables Warm Thanksgiving Day

By JAMES E. WILLIAMS

Families gathered around tables laden with turkey and the trimmings yesterday in Marin County in observance of a Thanksgiving Day which was blessed with a bright sun shining down on the changing colors of autumn.

For 205 persons it was a joyous holiday at the Whistlestop at 930 Tamalpais Avenue in San Rafael. For the fifth year the Marin Senior Coordinating Council and eight San Rafael churches hosted a turkey dinner for those who would otherwise have dined alone or not at all.

Richard J. Dressling of San Rafael, chairman of the event, called it a "great success." Over 70 volunteers, including senior citizens, contributed up to half their holiday to prepare and serve the feast which included 10 turkeys and mounds of goodies.

Dressling said 155 meals were served at the Whistlestop and 55 meals were delivered to shut-ins. The oldest luncheon guest was 90-year-old Archie McKensie of 60 Alto Vista in Mill Valley, "one of my better Thanksgiving Days with a very delicious meal."

While a large number went to the Whistlestop, well-known for past feasts, only three guests showed up at the First Baptist Church in Sausalito for a mammoth public turkey dinner, the church's first such effort.

Rev. L. Thomas Frederick said he and church members were surprised and not sure what went wrong. "We'd expected 100. Maybe we didn't publicize it enough, but we had posters all over town."

Twenty-eight dinners were served in all at the church on Filbert Street. That number included those eaten by church members who participated in the program.

"It was not what you'd call a rip-roaring success," Frederick chuckled. "Maybe we'll have to freeze the turkeys and keep them for Christmas."

The feast consisted of four roast turkeys, carrots, peas, potatoes, chocolate, lemon and pumpkin pies and punch.

In a more somber mood 50 to 60 persons gathered between 5 and 6 p.m. outside the home of San Francisco State College president Dr. Paul Romber, 55 Convent Court in San Anselmo, for a silent vigil to protest the proposed closing on Jan. 6 of a family student housing development — Gatorville — on the college campus.

Philippa Proulx, one of the protest leaders, said it "went very well, even though there was no sign of activity at the Romberg home. Apparently President Romberg was not at home."

Residents have been given until the January date to vacate the area. After the development is razed, the site will be used for an athletic field, according to a college spokesman.

It was also a special day at San Quentin with more than 200 relatives of prisoners showing up for a holiday visit. Information officer William D. Nyberg said the crowd was "about a normal Sunday crowd."

According to the Marin office of the California Highway Patrol, it was a very quiet day with light traffic. Patrolmen made eight drunken driving arrests and nailed one driver for being under the influence of drugs.

Elderly Man Is Injured In Fight

An 88-year-old resident of the Valley Park Convalescent Home in Mill Valley was reported in satisfactory condition today at Marin General Hospital after being injured in a fight last night with another elderly man.

Mill Valley police said John Kavanagh was hit on the head with the base of a bird cage during an argument with convalescent home resident, Walter Dittmer, 79.

Kavanagh was taken to the hospital at about midnight with multiple cuts on his face and hands and a broken nose.

Police said they were not sure what the dispute was about.

Appeal Approved For Dismissed Probation Officer In Sonoma

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — An appeal by a Sonoma County probation officer fired for allegedly allowing teen-ager drug use and sex at his home will be heard on Jan. 13.

Louis Hensley Jr., 49, asked on Nov. 10 for a hearing before a state officer who, he felt, would be more impartial than the Sonoma Civil Service Commission, the body which normally hears appeals of dismissals.

Hensley, of Santa Rosa, was fired on Oct. 22 after an extensive investigation by county sheriff's officers reportedly revealed he harbored young runaways at his Seawolf Drive home and allowed them to engage in illicit activities.

The county Civil Service commission approved the request for the hearing officer at a Wednesday meeting. The county board of supervisors had told the commission they approved of the request.

The hearing will take place at the Santa Rosa Veterans Memorial Building.

Star Probes Said Not Holding Up

By ROBERT C. COWEN
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

It has been intriguing to think that certain radio echoes might indicate the presence of a messenger probe from a distant star system. But the notion is not standing up to scientific scrutiny.

British radio engineers Anthony Lawton and Sidney Newton recently told the International Astronautical Congress at Amsterdam that efforts to raise such a probe failed last summer. Instead, they reinforce the probability that the mysterious echoes are due to natural phenomena and nothing else.

This doesn't absolutely rule out the possibility of such a probe existing. But it does underline the need for caution in the fascinating search for signs of civilized life elsewhere in the universe.

The echoes in question have puzzled scientists for decades. First detected in 1928 and occasionally heard thereafter, they seem to come from something in space at a distance less than, or comparable to, that of the moon. Furthermore, there is a delay in the echoes of a kind to be expected if a space capsule picked up earth radio signals and rebroadcast them.

Ronald N. Bracewell of Stanford University suggested in 1960 that an alien messenger might be doing this sort of thing to attract attention.

British science writer Duncan Lunan revived interest in the notion early last year by announcing that the intervals in the delays in the echoes are a code which he had broken. He claimed they show a map of the stars as seen from earth 13,000 years ago — the time the "messenger" would have arrived.

Although most experts were skeptical, interest in Lunan's theory redoubled last fall when Samuel Kaplan of Gorky University and some other Soviet scientists reported detecting radio signals from what might be an alien messenger in the solar system.

The mystery signals came in pulses after definite time lapses. They lasted for several minutes and were repeated several times a day.

Efforts to explain the signals as coming from secret U.S. military communication satellites have been unconvincing. At this writing, they remain a mystery. But Lunan's claim now looks rather thin.

With the help of an 18-foot satellite-tracking antenna donated by E.M.I. Electronics, the firm that employs Lunan, Lawton and Newton listened for the probe on frequencies and in a manner that should have raised it if the Lunan theory is correct. Instead, the few delayed echoes they did detect were random and clearly due to natural effects.

As reported in New Scientist, Lawton concludes that the space messanger theory is "a nice idea — but that's as far as it goes." He adds, "We would now definitely say that no records to date support the hypothesis that LDE's (the echoes) emanate from an artifact."

The search for intelligent life on other worlds is one of the most ambitious explorations of our time. Success would profoundly change our view of life and of our place in the universe.

But to leap to a romantic conclusion on flimsy evidence, as did Lunan, only serves to damage the credibility of this imaginative but, to conservative thinking, intellectually suspect research.

$390 Taken In Robbery

A San Rafael man was held up by two men in the alley behind 881 Fourth Street, San Rafael about 10:50 p.m. yesterday and robbed of $390 in cash, police reported today.

One of the men, Milton McDonald, 27, no known address, was later arrested on suspicion of armed robbery. He was held in Marin County jail with bail not set yet to appear Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

Richard Earl Phelps, 44, of 706 Third Street, told police he was leaving the 881 Club via the back door when attacked in the alley. One held him by the throat while the other took his money, he told police.

McDonald was later arrested at the club and was identified by Phelps as the one who had gone through his pockets.

$700 Damage Estimated In Tire Slashing

A Petaluma restaurant parking lot was hit last night by tire-slashing vandals who did nearly $700 damage to four parked vehicles.

Police received reports of the damage at about 9:30 p.m. and arrived at Denny's restaurant, 4986 Petaluma Boulevard North, to find several vehicles listing because of flat tires.

When the damage was totaled, it was found that one tire had been cut on a truck owned by S and M Towing Service of Petaluma; four tires on a panel truck owned by Richard C. Johnson of Mare Island, two on a car owned by Michael J. McCarthy of Napa and four on a car owned by Masao Matsumoto of 1030 Corona Road, Petaluma.

Police said today they suspect the damage may have been done out of spite by a man who reportedly left the restaurant earlier last night after an argument. No arrest has been made.

New Oil Spill In Novato

About 50 gallons of crankcase oil were spilled at McClay and Center Roads in Novato last night, the second mystery spill in the past two weeks.

Novato firemen flushed down the area at 11:48 p.m. and city public works crews spread sand to reduce the traffic hazard.

Last week about 55 gallons of oil were spilled at Tamalpais Avenue and Center Road.

Wilson Refused To Grovel As Guerrillas Demanded

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson says he refused an Arab guerrilla demand to express "groveling regret" for Britain's part in setting up the state of Israel. It was a condition for saving 20 British lives in last week's air hijacking.

Wilson told the story last night at a dinner of the Labor Friends of Israel. Among the guests was former Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir, in London as a foreign visitor to the British Labor party's annual convention.

Wilson told the dinner gathering that "20 British lives were at stake" when four Palestinians hijacked a British Airways VC-10 jet airliner to Tunis Nov. 21 with more than 40 persons aboard.

"To insure they were not killed, I was asked to agree to express the most groveling regret for what was described as the greatest crime to humanity, the establishment of the State of Israel," Wilson said.

"We were talking about 20 British lives," he said. "But there could be only one answer, even though 20 British lives were at stake, and I refused without even calling the cabinet."

The hijackers won the release of five guerrillas under house arrest in Egypt and two others jailed in Holland, but were turned down by every Arab country they asked to give them asylum.

They finally surrendered Monday after killing one hostage, a West German banker. All the British hostages, including the plane's crew, were released unharmed.

The overall Arab guerrilla group, the Palestine Liberation Organization, said it had arrested 26 persons and will put them on trial for complicity in the air piracy. PLO sources said the organization would execute the four actual hijackers if Tunisia releases them to the PLO.

Cairo newspapers reported today that security measures at Cairo airport have been tightened following the hijacking of the British airliner in the Persian Gulf sheikhdom of Dubai.

The reports said authorities have been ordered "to search all planes without exception before taking off and that the airliners be put under heavy guard while at the airport."

The security measures reported by newspapers also included restricting the use of the VIP lounge by Egyptian officials holding ranks from deputy minister on up.

PLO Accuses Iraq Of Aiding Hijackers

CAIRO (UPI) — The Voice of Palestine Radio said today Iraq has been spending millions of pounds to aid dissident Palestinian elements which were behind the hijacking of a British airliner to Tunis last week.

It said the Palestinian dissenters involved were led by Abu Nidal, who has been running a clandestine group in Iraq after breaking with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The charges against Iraq came in a political commentary to be broadcast by the radio tonight. The test was circulated to newsmen in advance without embargo.

The radio is run by the PLO and transmits from Cairo for two hours daily.

Addressing the Iraqis, the commentary said: "You have been spending millions in an attempt to divide the Palestinian front and to buy certain persons out of the Palestinian revolution or to start side battles directed against the march of our people."

It said some Iraqi leaders have asked the PLO "not to reveal the truth about the (British airliner) hijackers, their connections, the quarters which employed them and the aims behind their criminal operation."

The commentary said the Iraqi request was made in "secret contacts" with PLO leader Abu Iyad before he held a news conference in Cairo Wednesday night to talk about the hijacking.

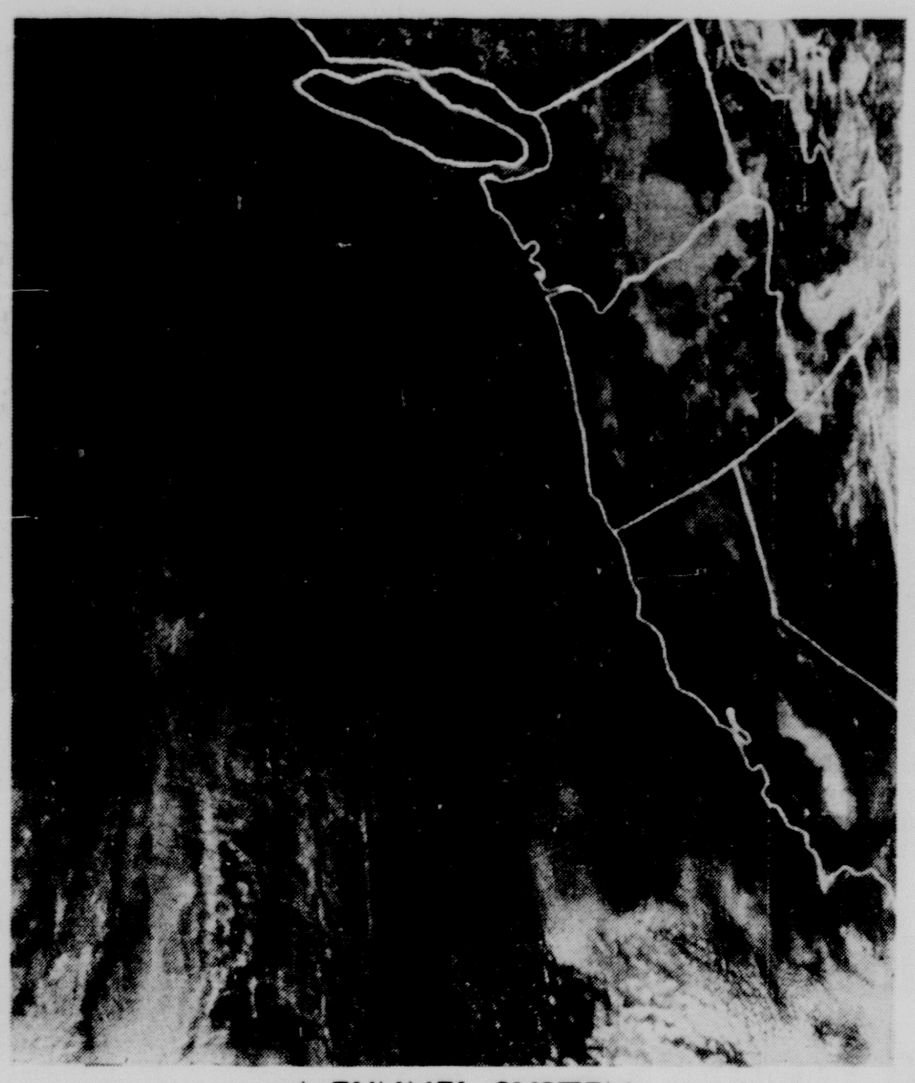

Abu Iyad gave a qualified answer at the news conference when asked whether Iraq was involved in the hijacking. He said "to my knowledge Iraq has not been implicated so far, but we can talk about this later."

The commentary accused Iraq of duplicity in supporting the PLO publicly while fostering divisions within its ranks secretly. It said this was in violation of last month's Rabat Arab summit resolution calling for non-interference in internal Palestinian affairs.

"It is clear now that undercover Iraqi policy is different from the policy followed in public by the so-called Iraqi revolution," the commentary said.

It recalled that Abu Nidal has been sentenced to death by the PLO and that Iraq has not so far heeded PLO demands for his extradition.

It said: "We shall continue to demand the criminal Abu Nidal and to ask that you Iraqis keep your sins and evils away from the Palestinian arena."

KLM To Fly Air Hassle Into Court

AMSTERDAM (UPI) — Royal Dutch Airlines KLM said today it would take the U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board to court on its demand that KLM hands in its flights schedule to the board.

The spokesman said KLM would go to the Columbia district Court of Appeals next Monday at the latest to oppose the demand.

He said the bilateral air transport agreement of Holland and the United States made no obligation to seek CAB approval of schedules and KLM had never submitted them.

CAB sent the demand to the airline last week after a breakdown in talks between U.S. and Dutch officials on U.S. proposals to reduce KLM's transatlantic frequencies in favor of U.S. competitors.

In the Washington talks Dutch transport minister Tjerk Westerterp told the American negotiators that their wish to clip KLM's transatlantic wings violated the bilateral agreement.

In Washington, the CAB said it does not believe grounds exist for court intervention.

A spokesman said the CAB issues its order Nov. 19 under regulations empowering it to request airlines to file details of flight schedules to the United States.

Referring to KLM's decision to go to court, the spokesman said "nothing has happened yet and there is no ground for court intervention."

He said the CAB would review the KLM's Netherlands flight schedules to decide whether to approve the flight schedules.

Should the board approve, no further action would be taken. Should it disapprove, its recommendation would be submitted to President Ford, who would have 10 days to decide whether to issue a non-appealable presidential order endorsing the recommendation.

Makarios Gets A Warm Welcome From Greeks

ATHENS (UPI) — Deposed President Archbishop Makarios of Cyprus received a tumultuous welcome today on his arrival in Athens for a week of talks with Greek leaders before returning to his island.

Premier Constantine Caramanlis and other government ministers welcomed Makarios at Athens Airport when he arrived from Frankfurt.

The archbishop drove into Athens through streets lined with tens of thousands of Greeks shouting, "With you to save Cyprus," Junta out of Cyprus!" and "No amnesty for CIA agents!"

A government spokesman said the president would address the crowd gathered in Constitution Square in the city center from the balcony of his hotel.

Makarios has said that he intends to return to the Mediterranean island and resume the presidency in the next few weeks.

Turkey has warned, however, that Makarios' projected return to Cyprus could have serious consequences. Some Turkish politicians said the Turkish army should occupy the entire island if he returns there.

Makarios left Cyprus July 16, the day after a coup against him by the Cypriot national guard, commanded by officers from the mainland of Greece.

Turkish forces invaded the island July 20 and captured one-third of it. The disastrous aftermath led Greece's military rulers to resign and call Caramanlis back from exile to become premier.

Makarios' visit to Athens was his first since October 1973, when he held talks with then Premier Spyros Markezinis.

The large crowd began gathering hours in advance today to give Makarios a hero's welcome to the country that engineered his overthrow as president.

The Caramanlis government rolled out the red carpet for the archbishop. Police took strict security measures against possible assassination attempts.

Police banned the entrance of unauthorized persons to Makarios' hotel, and hundreds of police were placed near and around Constitution Square.

Ford Names U.S. Judge For Alaska

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford said today he would nominate James M. Fitzgerald, a member of the Alaska Supreme Court, to be a U.S. district judge for the district of Alaska.

Fitzgerald, 54, of Anchorage, has served the state supreme court since 1972 and was chosen to succeed Raymond E. Plummer, who retired June 1, 1973 as a federal judge.

At the same time, Ford said he was nominating Kathryne Ford Vachon, of Miami, to serve on the National Credit Union board for the rest of a term expiring at the end of 1978.

Mrs. Vachon, who has worked since 1947 for the Tropical Telco Federal Credit Union, was chosen to succeed Lorena C. Matthews, who resigned last July.

The board has six members, one for each of its regions, Mrs. Vachon would represent region 3 with headquarters in Atlanta.

The stoppage will coincide with an eight-hour nationwide strike of all Italian workers for guaranteed wages and higher cost of living allowances. In addition to this, seamen have demands of their own for a reform of the merchant fleet and a new pension system.

$3 Million In Bogus Money Confiscated

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — More than $3 million in counterfeit bills was confiscated and five men were arrested during the week in the Riverside and Redlands areas, a spokesman for the U.S. Secret Service said today.

Robert Powis, special agent in charge of the regional office, said the money was found in a Redlands apartment last Monday following an extensive investigation.

A hand press which apparently was to be used to put serial numbers on the 20, 50 and 100-dollar bills also was confiscated. Powis said the bills had not been numbered.

J. Harry Davidson, 65, administrator of the Wissahickon Inn, a senior citizens retirement home, was arrested at the same address. He was taken before a U.S. Magistrate in Los Angeles Wednesday and charged in connection with the counterfeiting operation and released on bail.

Later Wednesday, Dr. Willis Madison, 57, a chiropractor, was arrested at his Reseda office and also charged in the operation.

Three other men were arrested late yesterday. They were Donald Joel Aronson, 43, Riverside, owner of the Times Picayune News, and two printers, John Willis Bloom, 29,and Daily Lane Wiles, 38.

Bloom and Wiles were on probation from a counterfeiting conviction Dec. 20, 1973, in Riverside.

Powis said that Madison, charged also with being the financial backer of the operation, had attempted to pass a bogus 850 bill in Mexico City last July and had been released by Mexican authorities.

Powis said that was the only bill passed by the counterfeiting group.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Adults Need Calcium In Diet Just As Much As Children Do

According to Dr. Herta Spencer, adults need to consume as much calcium as children.

Dr. Spencer, a grantee of the National Institute of Dental Research, found that 1200 mg. of calcium a day (the amount in a normal balanced diet, which includes three glasses of milk per day) provides a positive calcium balance. Most people will get enough calcium (800 mg.) if they eat a balanced diet and drink two glasses of milk per day.

When adults consume a calcium-deficit diet for many years, the compound is removed from its storage depots in the bone tissue. The could result in osteoporosis, a common bone condition in which the vertebrae and long bones become porous and fragile. It is one of the most frequent causes of backache and spontaneous fractures in oldsters, especially women after menopause.

MILK IS an excellent source of calcium, which is readily absorbed. Calcium gluconate (tablet or powder) frequently is substituted for calcium, but unlike the calcium found in milk, not all of it is absorbed by the body. Perhaps milk is more effective because it contains phosphorus, an element that plays a role in calcium metabolism. When phosphorus is added to calcium tablets, higher blood levels are obtained since less calcium is lost through the urine.

Smaller amounts of calcium are found in certain vegetables and cereals.

Because calcium plays an important role in maintaining bone tissue, children and pregnant women need more of it than the rest of us. But the results of Dr. Spencer's research indicate that "the rest of us" should also increase our intake of calcium by drinking more milk or eating foods that are made with milk.

ALMOST UNIVERSAL with age, demineralization (bone loss) is particularly serious in women who are prone to hip fractures and backaches. In addition to increasing the calcium intake, physicians also recommend vitamin D, hormones and sodium fluoride (which hardens teeth) to strengthen the bones.

Analgesics and physiotherapy are beneficial when the osteoporotic process causes pain. Strong supporting garments also lessen the strain on the back.

VICIOUS VIRUSES

R. A. writes: How did the term virus come into being and about how long ago was it used?

REPLY

According to Harry Wain, author of "The Story Behind the Word," this Latin term, meaning slime or poison, came into its present use about 65 years ago. It refers to ultramicroscopic or filtrable viruses.

INFECTED PARROTS

B. writes: Is there any cure for psittacosis or parrot fever, a condition caused by birds?

REPLY

Yes, the antibiotics.

RETINA, HYPERTENSION

A reader writes: Can high blood pressure have an adverse effect on the eyesight?

REPLY

Yes it can. High blood pressure encourages hardening of the arteries and the retinal vessels frequently are involved.

Midwesterners donned caps, boots and mufflers early today in a continuous light snowfall and near-zero temperatures in the Plains, lower Rockies, Great Lakes, Ohio Valley, and Minnesota, Kansas and Missouri.

The National Weather Service reported at least two inches of snow stuck to the ground in northeastern New Mexico and southeastern Colorado, and an inch of new snow turned the ground white at Rapid City, S.D., and Syracuse and Binghampton, N.Y.

Arctic air seeped southward in the Plains, and temperatures dropped to 10 degrees in the Dakotas, Nebraska and the northern Rockies.

Northern New Mexico, Missouri, Pennsylvania and the mountains of Colorado, were under travelers' advisories.

Early morning temperatures around the nation ranged from 1 below zero at Laramie, Wyo., to 70 degrees at Miami and Key West, Fla.

Deputies End Holiday Feast On Sour Note

SAN BRUNO (UPI) — Five sheriff's deputies were halfway through a midday Thanksgiving dinner when they learned the salt in the savory turkey gravy was a potentially lethal industrial cleaner.

Chef Jose Vasquez sounded the alarm after discovering he had mistaken tri-sodium phosphate for salt, which is kept in a similar tin in the county jail kitchen.

The five jailers were whisked from the table to a hospital poison center where they were given stomach tranquilizers. They returned to work complaining of burning sensations in their mouths and stomachs.

Nation's Jailers To Hold Parley

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Jailers from throughout the country will gather in Sacramento Monday to discuss the problems of jail management, the Sacramento Sheriff's Department said today.

Chief Deputy Harold Guerin said 300 officials are expected to attend the five-day national seminar. It is being sponsored by the department.

Scheduled guest sheakers include W. J. Estelle Jr., director of the Texas state corrections department, and Sheriff T. L. Baker of Amarillo, Texas.

ROUND HOUSES — Because of their shape and construction, these two silo-shaped buildings in Rockport, Mass., are probably as strong as anything in town. The northeast gales which sweep in over the harbor are a tough test.

Peter Rabbit Would Have Loved These Round Houses

By CHARLES E. DOLE
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

ROCKPORT, Mass. — It's hard enough to build a perfectly round building. But when a town zoning line runs smack through the middle of the lot, it gets even tougher.

One zoning ordinance calls for a 10-foot setback from the sidewalk while the other demands a 15-foot setback.

That was the problem confronting David Eldredge of Swarthmore, Pa., and his brother, Harrison Cady Eldredge of North Haven, Conn., college teachers who are joint owners of a piece of property here on the tip of Cape Ann.

Already sitting on the 30-by 50-foot lot was a small, two-story conical building which once belonged to their uncle, Harrison Cady of Peter Rabbit fame. Cady, one of the first 20th-century artists to "discover" Rockport, illustrated the Peter Rabbit books for author Thornton Burgess.

The Eldredges decided they wanted to make use of the land, including the 10-foot-diameter tower which had been moved to the site in 1919 and before that was used to store dye as part of a nearby factory complex.

What could they put on the land that would be satisfactory to both families? First, they got hold of a local architect, Marvin Waller.

"We really wanted to build a single-story building," says David Eldredge, "but we were turned down in a bid for a zoning variance so we had to go up."

"We told the architect to think in the round so as to unify the new structure with the old plan," said Mrs. Eldredge.

"We accepted the first plan developed by Mr. Waller. "So I got the first floor in on the setbacks and then I was able to hang the second floor out a little bit which gave me more space to work with upstairs.

"All the framing had to be fabricated on the job. We couldn't just start out with two 2x10's. We'd start with 1x10's and build them up." What he got is a building of massive strength. Being round, the house doesn't require any bracing because it is so rigid.

"The roof was the toughest part of the whole job," said Lovell Parsons, one of three partners in a local construction firm that built the structure.

"We had to put the rafters close together — on eight eight-inch centers — so we could shape the plywood."

The foundation was built out of concrete blocks which were filled with concrete.

Rookie Clint Longley Is All Quarterback For Cowboys

HIS LAST PLAY — Dallas quarterback Roger Staubach went down hard in the arms of Washington's Dave Robinson while Chris Hanburger watched in the third quarter. Staubach was injured on the play and left the game in favor of rookie Clint Longley.

'Mad Bomber' Changes Image Against 'Skins

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

For most of his rookie year, Clint Longley has been simply the "Mad Bomber" or "Snake Hunter" to his Dallas Cowboy teammates. He changed that yesterday.

Longley took over at quarterback in the third period when Roger Staubach was knocked dizzy and threw two touchdown passes, the last a 50-yarder to Drew Pearson with just 28 seconds left, to lift the Cowboys to a 24-23 upset of the Washington Redskins.

The victory kept the Cowboys' slim wild card playoff hopes alive in the National Conference East and prevented them from being eliminated from post-season competition for the first time in nine years. St. Louis leads the division at 9-2, Washington now is 8-4 and Dallas 7-5.

Longley, a 6-foot-1, 195-pounder, picked up the "Mad Bomber" tag in training camp when he almost skulled Coach Tom Landry in a supervising tower with a pass and kept the sidelines loose with his wild throws. The "Snake Hunter" tag went on when people found out his off-season occupation — he hunts rattlesnakes.

But yesterday Longley was all quarterback. Entering the game with the Cowboys trailing 16-3, he threw a 35-yard TD pass to tight end Billy Joe Dupree and set up Walt Garrison's one-yard run to lift Dallas to a 17-16 advantage. Duane Thomas' 19-yard run rallied Washington to a 23-17 lead before Longley hit Pearson on the 15 and the fleet receiver sped in for the TD. Efren Herrera's conversion provided the margin of victory.

"They told me to grab my helmet and get in there," said Longley, who became Staubach's backup when Craig Morton was traded to the New York Giants last month. "I had to find my helmet first."

"Nobody had me deep," said Pearson, explaining the winning score. "Longley did just a great job. He stayed in the pocket, read his keys and hit the open man. He was superb."

"Football is an incredible game," said Landry. "This is what makes it so unbelievable at times. Clint Longley has incredible ability. He just knows where his receivers are. He's too young to read the defenses correctly. It's just a special football sense and he's going to be a good one."

Washington Coach George Allen, who had his division title hopes all but wiped out with the loss and now must fight for a wild card playoff berth, simply called the defeat, "the toughest loss we've ever had. I can't remember a tougher loss. Longley did a great job."

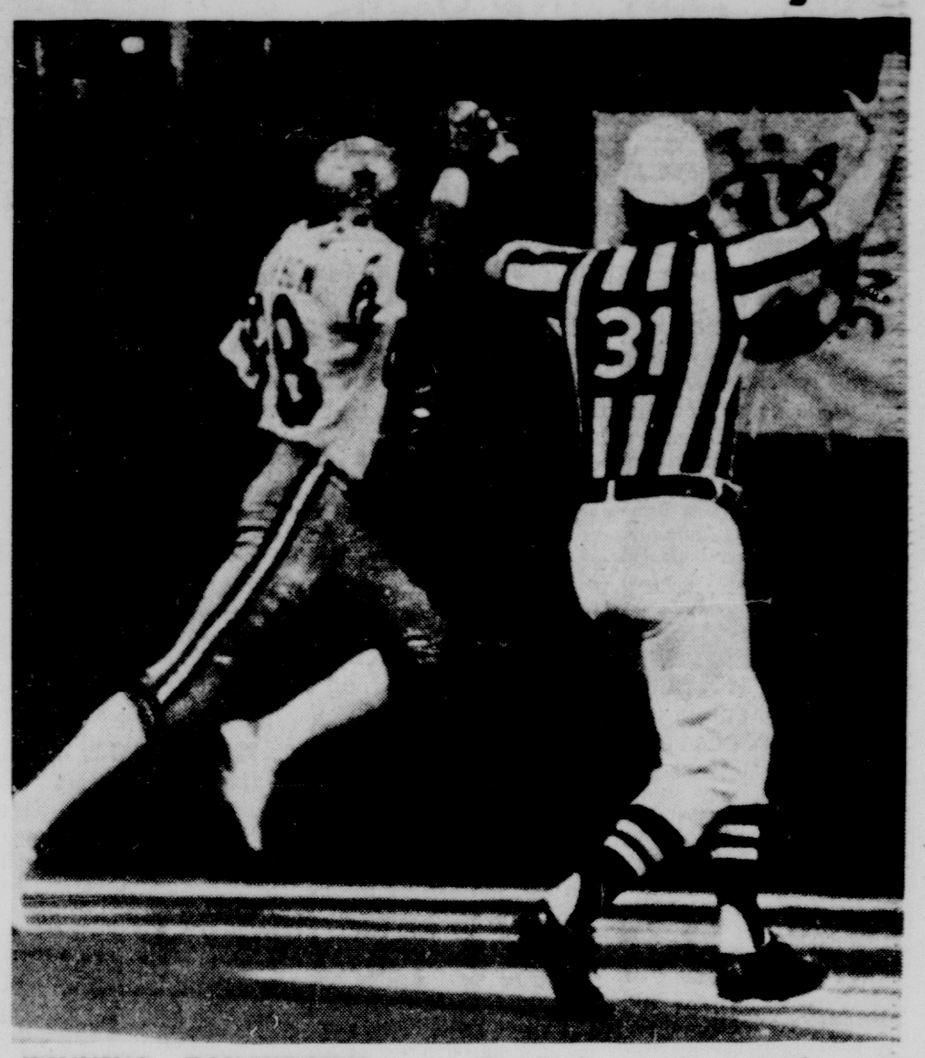

The Redskins' last hope for a comeback was wiped out when Billy Kilmer fumbled trying to pass and Harvey Martin recovered for Dallas.

In the other Thanskgiving Day game, Otis Armstrong carried 24 times for 144 yards to become the first National Football League player this season to crack the 1,000- yard barrier as the Denver Broncos beat the Detroit Lions 31-27.

Armstrong, a second-year back from Purdue, boosted his total to 1,082 yards and scored once in a three-touchdown burst in the third period that lifted the Broncos ahead.

Jon Keyworth scord twice for Denver on one-yard runs and Charley Johnson flipped a one-yard TD pass to Riley Odoms. Greg Landry threw 23 yards to Altie Taylor and Levi Johnson returned a fumble 55 yards to highlight's Detroit's scoring.

The loss left Detroit at 6-6 and all but killed the Lions' playoff chances after they had pulled to within a game of Minnesota in the NFC Central. Denver is 6-5-1 and has a slim chance in the AFC for a wild card slot.

WINNING TOUCHDOWN — Drew Pearson of the Dallas Cowboys held the ball aloft after catching a 50-yard touchdown pass from rookie Clint Longley in the final seconds yesterday at Dallas. The touchdown gave the Cowboys a 24-23 win over Washington.

A Fast Start In Basketball

Marin County's high school basketball teams are off to a fantastic start.

In the first week of the non-league season, Marin County Athletic League teams stand 6-0 after turning back challenges from San Francisco and North Bay teams. Victims who have fallen prey to the Marin preps are Washington (twice) and Balboa of San Francisco, Montgomery of Santa Rosa and St. Patrick's (twice) of Vallejo.

That's quite a reversal of form. I remember when the starting days of the non-league season showed a record more like 1-5. There was cause for celebration when Marin teams broke even in the win-loss column.

But this year things are going to be different. Just wait and see.

PETE HAYWARD, in his third year as Drake High's basketball coach, feels this is going to be a fine year for Marin basketball. Drake has already whipped two S.F. teams, Balboa by 89-68 and Washington by 69-58.

"This is going to be a good year for basketball in Marin," said Hayward. "There are some fine teams."

Hayward's own Pirates team is the smallest in the county and one of the smallest in the Bay Area. Tallest player on the team is 6-foot-1 forward Walt Gilespie. Mel Judson has been playing at center and he's only 5-10. "But he can really jump," said Hayward.

Two years ago Hayward had another small team and he took it all the way to the Tournament of Champions in Oakland. The one tall player on the front line on that team was John Channell, 6-4, who is now playing at College of Marin.

Hayward is already an expert in the field of small basketball teams. At the California Coaches Association Convention in San Francisco last year, he was speaker on the topic, "How to Win in Basketball with a Small Team."

THERE WAS ONE other player on that 1972-73 Drake team which made it so great — Eddie Chavez. Chavez was a junior on that league champion team and now is a freshman playing varsity ball at University of Santa Clara.

Says the Broncos' press book about Chavez, a 6-1 guard: "Former Marin County Player of the Year gives Broncos excellent ball handling and fine outside shooting. Has potential to become one of best-ever guards in Santa Clara history. Tremendous competitor; will see considerable duty as freshman. Aggressive style of play helps make him fine defender."

That's putting a lot of pressure on the young man's shoulders but he's the kind of guy who can take it.

THERE'S ANOTHER former Marin County Athletic League player on Santa Clara's team and he, too, is a guard. He's Jerry Piro, a senior who learned much of his basketball at Redwood High. He will be a starter for the Broncos.

To show how one thing leads to another, see how we drifted from the present Marin County prep scene to the Drake players of two years ago. That took us to Santa Clara and a former Redwood player now playing for the Broncos. Well, speaking of former Redwood players, Tim Hennessey is a junior forward at Oregon State, Scott Trobbe is a senior forward at Stanford and Steve McGee is a junior forward at University of Hawaii.

Abdul-Jabbar, Cowens Lead Vote-Getters

NEW YORK (AP) — Boston's Dave Cowens, who has played in only three games this season, and Milwaukee's Kareen Abdul-Jabbar, who has appeared in only two contests, are the leading vote-getters at center in early fan balloting for the 1975 National Basketball Association All-Star Game.

The first weekly computerized vote count of the balloting for the starting lineups for the game, to be played at Phoenix on Jan. 14 was announced today by NBA Commissioner Walter Kennedy.

Cowens, who missed the Celtics' first 17 games this season because of a broken bone in his right foot suffered during an exhibition game, nevertheless, led in voting for the Eastern Conference's starting center spot over Buffalo's Bob McAdoo, the league's second leading scorer. Vote totals were not announced.

At the same time, Abdul-Jabbar, who was sidelined for Milwaukee's first 16 games because of a broken bone in his right hand and an injured right cornea, both suffered in the same exhibition game, was the pacesetter in voting for the starting center spot on the Western Conference team. Detroit's Bob Lanier, one of the league's top scorers and rebounders, was the runner-up.

The other East leaders were forwards John Havlicek of Boston and Elvin Hayes of Washington, and guards Walt Frazier of New York and Jo Jo White of Boston. In the West, the other frontrunners were forwards Rick Barry of Golden State and Spencer Haywood of Seattle, and guards Gail Goodrich of Los Angeles and Nate Archibald of Kansas City-Omaha.

The league said that Havlicek, a starter for the East in the last six All-Star Games, led all vote-getters. Abdul-Jabbar, an All-Star in each of his five NBA seasons, was the top vote-getter in the West.

OUT IN FRONT

Mark Richards of Australia slid down the face of a thundering wave yesterday at Hawaii's Waimea Bay during the finals of the Smirnoff Pro-Am Surfing Classic. Reno Abellira of Hawaii won the event and $5,000, in breakers that reached a height of 35 feet.

KODAK ALL-AMERICA

Griffin, Davis Head Team

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — Archie Griffin of Ohio State and Anthony Davis of Southern California, the leading contenders for this year's Heisman trophy, yesterday were named to the Kodak All-American team selected by the American Football Coaches Association.

Griffin, a 5-foot-9, 184-pound junior, and Davis, a 5-9, 183-pound senior, were named to the backfield along with senior quarterback David Humm of Nebraska and junior running back Joe Washington of Oklahoma following a poll of the selection committee representing 2,100 college coaches across the nation.

The coaches named 12 men to their starting offense and 11 to the defense, and so diversified were their selections that no school had more than two players named.

Traditional powers Oklahoma, Notre Dame, Ohio State and Nebraska each had two players selected, but some lesser rated teams such as Harvard, Clemson, Mississippi State, Miami (Fla.) and North Carolina were also represented.

Oklahoma, which boasts a prefect 10-0 record, had linebacker Rod Shoate named in addition to Washington; Notre Dame was represented by split end Pete Demmerle and guard Gerry Dinardo; Ohio State placed tackle Kurt Schumacher and Griffin; and Nebraska was represented by tackle Marvin Crenshaw as well as Humm. Dinardo becomes the second member of his family to make the Kodak team, his brother Larry, also of Notre Dame, having been named in 1970.

Others selected to the offensive squad were tight end Dan Cunningham of Clemson, guard Ken Huff of North Carolina, center Sylvester Croom of Alabama and flanker Pat McInally of Harvard.

Rounding out the defensive unit were ends Jimmy Webb of Mississippi State and Pat Donavan of Stanford, tackles Randy White of Maryland and Mike Hartenstine of Penn State, middle guard Rubin Carter of Miami (Fla.), linebackers Ken Bernich of Auburn and Bog Breunig of Arizona State and deep backs Dave Brown of Michigan, Robert Giblin of Houston and Mike Williams of LUS.

Shoate, who finished second in the balloting to Griffin, and Brown are the lone repeaters from last year's team.

Raiders In Game Of Bandages?

OAKLAND (AP) — The Oakland Raiders and the New England Patriots may wind up throwing bandages at each other instead of footballs this Sunday.

New England, fighting for a wild-card berth in the National Football League playoffs, has lost all three of its regular wide receivers, Reggis Rucker, Darly Stingley and Steve Schubert.

Also, running back Sam (Bam) Cunningham, defensive tackle Art Moore and linebacker Maury Damkroger all are through for the season.

The Raiders, who have clinched the American Football Conference West title and a playoff slot, will go without veteran defensive backs Willie Brown and Jack Tatum, both out with strained knees. Running back Marv Hubbard is still resting his injured back and Clarance Davis is coming back slowly from a knee injury.

Seals Hope To Break String

OAKLAND (UPI) — The California Golden Seals hope to break their six-game losing string when they host the New York Islanders tonight.

"We're loose," Coach Marshall Johnston said at the Seals' practice yesterday. "The team is playing well and we're going to put it together soon."

Confederate Yankee Bay Meadows Winner

SAN MATEO (UPI) — Confederate Yankee won a 1-½ length victory in the $25,000-added Thanksgiving Day Handicap at Bay Meadows.

Newcombe And Evert Triumph

HIRAKATA, Japan (UPI) — John Newcombe of Australia played brilliantly under pressure today and defeated Cliff Drysdale of South Africa, 2-6, 6-2, 7-6 to win the men's singles title of the $100,000 Gunze World Tennis Tournament.

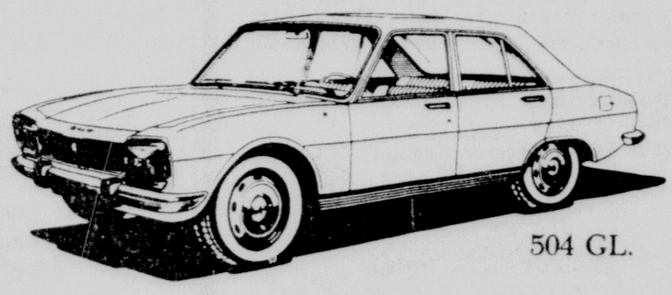

Newcombe and Drysdale thrilled a capacity crowd of 5,000 at the Matsushita Denki Gymnasium with one of the best tennis performances seen in Japan.

They kept their service with powerful shots until it was 6-all and made necessary a 9-point tie breaker in the third set. It went to three-all after which Newcombe came through with a service point to lead 4-3. Newcombe forced Drysdale to run to his right and then smashed Drysdale's lob for a placement to win the match and $20,000 first prize.

Drysdale received $7,000 as a runner-up.

Chris Evert, 19, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., the youngest player to win the Wimbledon women's single in 22 years this year, easily defeated Rosie Casals of Sausalito, 6-0, 6-2 to win the $12,000 top prize in the women's singles. Miss Casals got the runnerup prize of $7,000.

Busy Week For Game Warden

We know that the striped bass fishing in San Francisco Bay was good the last two months. The party boat catches for October show how really good it was: 14,556 stripers were logged in by the fleet. Probably, the November catch results will be just as good. The number of sturgeon logged in was just 24 for October.

In late November, 12 of the 23 hunters who showed up for the special Humboldt County Roosevelt elk hunt got their elk which included three bulls and nine cows, the largest of which was a bull weighing 495 pounds field dressed. Fifty permits, 12 for bulls and 38 for anterless elk, were drawn for the two hunts held on Nov. 16 to 24 and Nov. 30 through Dec. 8.

UP AT FORT BRAGG last week, Game Warden Jerry Perkins was busy. It all started routinely on Sunday, when Perkins came across two deer poachers near Usal in northwest Mendocino County. They had two bucks, a doe, and a spotted fawn, and Perkins arrested them for unlawful possession of deer during the closed season. The two were booked and released on $250 bail to the Long Valley Justice Court at Leggett.

On Monday, the warden was tipped to a bad scene on the Noyo River east of Fort Bragg. There, someone had poisoned one-half mile of the stream apparently with a mixture of Clorox and ammonia, killing at least 47 spawning salmon, weighing five to 12 pounds each.

While investigating this case, Perkins spotted two adults and a juvenile illegally snagging salmon on the river. He wrote citations for the two adults and started back to his motorcycle parked some distance upstream. There, he spotted two other "sportsmen" who had left the stream and were busily disabling his cycle.

With these two culprits in custody and his motorcycle disabled, Perkins needed help; he asked one of the young men he had cited for salmon snagging to go call the sheriff. The man objected. Perkins then quoted him a law which stated that anyone refusing help to a police officer investigating a crime can be charged as an accomplice. The man got the sheriff and Perkins booked his prisoners into the Fort Bragg jail. He charged them with malicious mischief and interfering with a police officer. They were released on $440 bail each.

Later in the week, Perkins had a discouraging court appearance when two men he had arrested last August for shooting a doe at night managed to plea-bargain their way to a lesser charge of possession of a loaded gun in a car. They were fined $65 each.

Then, after leaving court, Perkins was called to assist two other wardens investigating a complaint on Cedar Creek, a tributary of the Eel River. They discovered three men hunting and fishing without licenses. There was a deer carcass buried in their camp and one of them admitted killing a pileated woodpecker, which is a protected bird — three more arrests.

By week's end, Perkins had completed his investigation into the salmon poisoning incident and obtained a warrant to search the homes of two suspects. The two were not home or had fled by the time Perkins and the other officers appeared. The suspects had neglected to completely clean up all evidence of poaching activities. Along with other evidence, the officers found fresh blood, fresh deer hooves, and a hide buried in the yard, and a bag containing fresh deer meat in a garage.

So Perkin's score at the end of the week stood at nine arrested, two suspects being sought, and two convicted of a lesser charge.

Skating Champ Operated On

BERLIN (UPI) — World figure skating champion Jan Hoffmann of East Germany has undergone a knee operation and "is as well as can be expected," ADN, the East German news agency said today.

Hoffmann said he has given up the idea of taking part in the next world championships.

LOOSE BALL — Leroy Ellis of the Philadelphia 76ers (25) fell over Cleveland's Steve Patterson in a fight for a loose ball during first half action last night at Richfield, Ohio. The Cavaliers won the National Basketball Association game, 110-103. (UPI Telephoto)

Reserve Cavs' Forward Has Right To Be Tired

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Fred Foster was a bit tired last night and the Cleveland Cavaliers' forward had a right to be.

The former Miami of Ohio star, who had averaged seven minutes of playing time in the Cavs' first 14 games, logged 33 minutes of action in sparking Cleveland to a 110-103 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers.

With starting forward Bobby Smith fighting a bout with the flu, Cleveland Coach Bill Fitch sent Foster in with three minutes gone in the second period and the Cavs trailing 35-28.

Foster, who combined with Dick Snyder for 17 second period points, hit 5-for-5 from the field as the Cavs bounced back to trail 56-55 at halftime. Foster hit two straight shots after intermission and the Cavs moved ahead to stay with 4:31 left in the third period when Snyder hit from 13 feet out to give the Cavs a 70-68 lead and the 76ers never caught up.

"I have been shooting well lately, but I was getting tired in the fourth period," said Foster, who hit on 11-of-14 shots.

Portland defeated Phoenix 88-85 in the other National Basketball Association last night while Kentucky downed Virginia 108-95 in the only American Basketball Association game.

Blazers 88, Suns 85

Portland used five straight free throws within a minute at the end of the game to edge Phoenix. After an 83-83 tie, Lloyd Neal converted a foul shot to make it 84-83 and Geoff Petrie and Larry Steele each hit a pair to put the Blazers ahead 88-83 with eight seconds left.

Colonels 108, Squares 95

Center Artis Gilmore scored 24 points and hauled down 20 rebounds to pace Kentucky over Virginia.

World Bowl Next For Winner Of Memphis-Florida Contest

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — The Memphis Southmen take on the Florida Blazers tonight for the right to meet the Birmingham Americans in the World Football League's first World Bowl on Dec. 5.

Southmen officials expect about 20,000 fans in the 50,000-seat Memphis Memorial Stadium for the final WFL playoff game which will be televised nationally at 8 p.m. EST. (The game will be televised delayed in the Bay Area on Channel 2 at 6 p.m.)

Win or lose, the Blazers can expect to gain one thing from the matchup — their first paychecks since the middle of September.

After expenses are paid, 70 per cent of the gate receipts from tonight's contest will go into a players' pool. The winners get 60 per cent of the pool and the losers 40 per cent.

"The players hope to see a big crowd," Memphis Coach John McVay said, "Both for the gate receipts and because they like to play in front of big home crowds. But if they had to, they'd play for nothing to win the championship."

Play for nothing is what the Blazers have done for more than two months. A deal that was expected to give them their money this week fell through.

"We're mad now," Florida quarterback Bob Davis said. "The majority feel we're never going to get paid."

"We're going to take it out on Memphis," Blazers Coach Jack Pardee said.

The Southmen, who haven't missed a paycheck in the league's inaugural season and finished with the best regular-season record of 17-3, have the advantage of an extra week's rest going into the game.

Memphis and Birmingham, which defeated Hawaii 22-19 Wednesday night to earn a bowl slot, received first-round byes in the playoffs because they finished one-two in the regular season standings. Memphis won the Central Division title and Birmingham was second with a 15-5 mark.

The Blazers, who won the league's Eastern Division championship with a 14-6 slate, defeated Philadelphia in last week's quarterfinal playoff round.

Marin Catholic Downs St. Pat

VALLEJO — Marin Catholic High School combined sharp shooting by Mike Mahoney and fourth quarter heroics by Tim Hurley for a 75-71, season-opening basketball victory over St. Patrick Wednesday night.

Mahoney, all-Marin County Athletic League last year as a junior, poured in 24 points, and Hurley, a senior up from the junior varsity, scored 10 after coming off the bench in the final period. Hurley also had five rebounds.

Marin Catholic continues its non-league schedule tonight at 8:30 against St. Ignatius in San Francisco.

NEW YORK — George Stinbrenner meets with his lawyer this weekend to decide whether he will test in the courts baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's ruling that he is "ineligible and incompetent" to participate in the affairs of the New York Yankees for the next two years.

Kuhn handed down his surprising decision Wednesday, reasoning that the integrity of baseball might be compromised if Steinbrenner were not disciplined.

The decision, one of the harshest handed down by a commissioner since the office was created in 1920, was based on Steinbrenner's admission that he made illegal campaign contributions to both parties. Steinbrenner said he was "astonished" that Kuhn could suggest he was "incompetent" and that he would announce his future plans, if any, "sometime next week."

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Claiming Loss On Worthless Stocks

By DAVID R. SARGENT

Q. As a result of some unwise investments a number of years ago, I hold shares in two companies which are apparently no longer in business. How do I go about claiming the loss on my income tax?—C.L.

A. Federal tax rules state that you can't claim a loss until the securities become completely worthless. By writing to the secretaries of the states in which the companies are incorporated, you should be able to establish whether bankruptcies have been filed and if (and in what year) the charters were forfeited. The loss may be claimed only for that year in which the charters were forfeited. The mere act of going through bankruptcy is not enough to establish a claim of worthlessness, since the securities still could be held to have some value, particularly if the company is in the act of reorganizing or is still doing business.

If you are able to establish the year in which worthlessness occurred, you may file an amended return for that year. If, however, you are unable to determine if the securities are without value, some tax advisers say you can protect your claim by filing the deduction anyway and renewing the claim in each subsequent year. Another approach, if there is any market at all for the shares, is to sell for a pittance and then claim the loss unchallenged. For more specific advice on individual issues, you should consult your tax adviser.

Q. Now that Chrysler Corp. (NYSE) shares are selling at approximately $10, less than one-quarter of book value, do you think it is a desirable investment?—T.F.

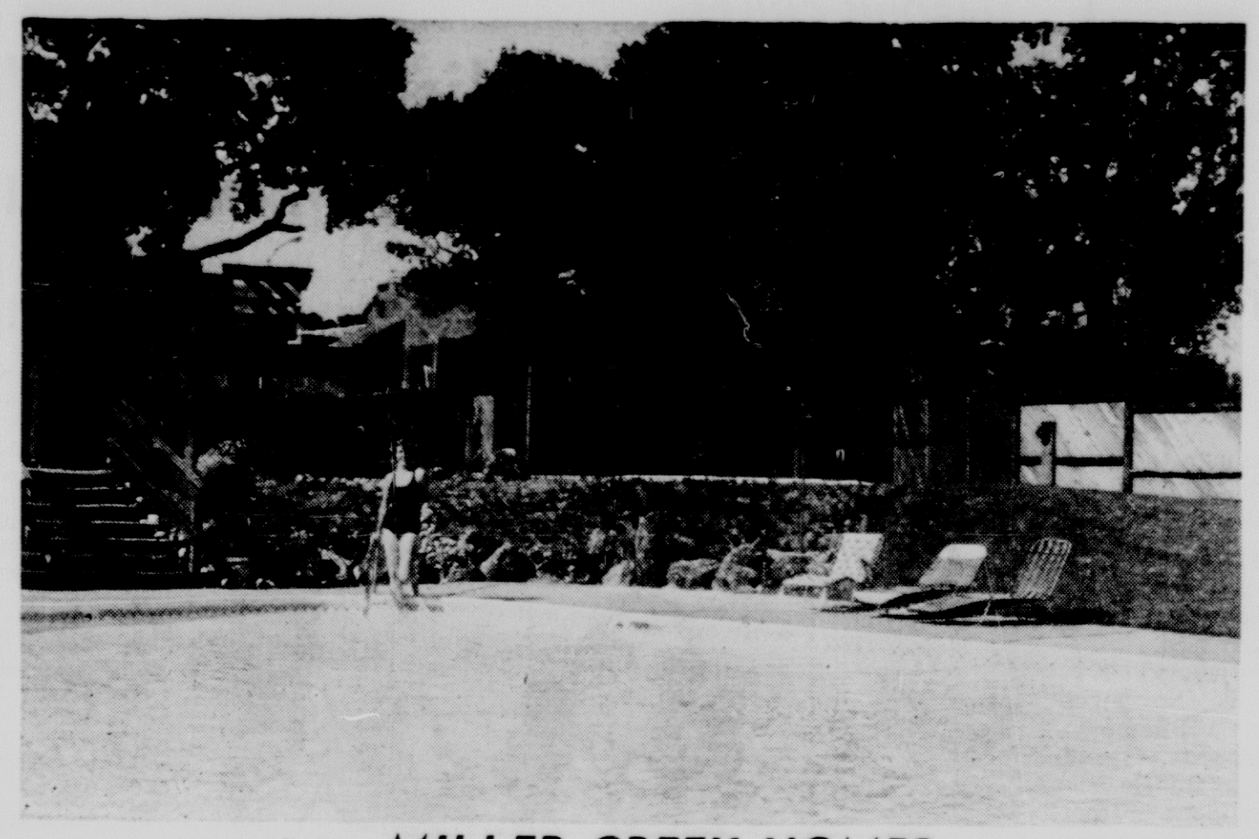

A. With earnings for 1974 expected to be in the $1 area, the $1.40 annual dividend payment cannot be considered secure, particularly in light of the uninspiring outlook for the industry for 1975. It should be further noted that a significant portion of earnings was derived from inventory profits, a lower tax rate and reduced amortization. Until the economic outlook improves, reestablishing consumer and stock market confidence, this issue should be avoided, despite the discount from book value at which it is trading.

(Mr. Sargent cannot answer all mail personally, but will answer all questions possible in his column.)

Mass Layoffs Likely To Result In A Productivity Increase

NEW YORK (AP) — One likely effect of the mass layoffs and other cutbacks by industry is a rise in productivity, which has been plunging at one of the sharpest rates in the years since World War II.

Although the postwar increases in productivity have averaged between 2 and 3 per cent, declines have been registered in five of the past six quarters. In the third quarter the drop was 2.4 per cent.

Productivity, or output per man hour, is not a measure solely of how diligently production workers attend to their chores. Instead, it measures how effectively manpower, capital and technology are used.

While to some extent the measure can be changed by poor worker attitudes on the assembly line, decisions by white collar workers in the front office are far more likely to raise or lower productivity.

Two of these decisions, it now seems clear, were to keep work forces at capacity and to continue high production schedules despite a dropoff in demand, most noticeably in the automotive industry.

The situation isn't at all unusual. Productivity often drops during the latter stages of a period of economic expansion as various inefficiencies — big inventories, oversized staffs, poor discipline — erode output per man hour.

One of the most obvious factors in the decline is the employment of marginal workers, those with little or only poorly developed skill. Overtime work, sometimes as premium wage rates, can also cut into output efficiency.

As various large corporations begin housecleaning both on the production line and in the executive office an increase in the productivity rate generally can be expected. That has been the experience.

Post-Holiday Market Sags At Opening

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices moved broadly lower today in slow post-Thanksgiving trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Declines led advances, 612 to 359, among the 1,381 issues crossing the tape.

Many were awaiting the outcome of the United Mine Workers vote scheduled for Monday which could end the nationwide coal strike now in its third week. There was uncertainty about the outcome of the vote on a new contract.

Wall Street remained deeply concerned about the nation's recession, which has been deepened by the coal strike and cutbacks in the automobile industry. Auto production in December is expected to be 29 per cent less than a year ago.

Even The Doc's Plan Might Be Better

Only older Marinites will remember "Doc" Townsend. But Dr. Francis Everett Townsend's Old Age Revolving Pension Plan was the most popular idea around in the mid-1930s.

Every community, even the smallest crossroads variety, had its Townsend Club. The Long Beach physician became such a popular hero that there was a strong move to run him for president.

His OARP idea was beautiful in its simplicity: Every American citizen past the age of 60 would receive $200 per month from the government. The payments would be financed by a 2 per cent national sales tax.

In those depression days, $200 a month was no trifle. It was more than most people with steady jobs were making.

Fiscal experts claimed Dr. Townsend's plan wouldn't work, that it would bankrupt the United States, etc. But a great many people — especially those over 60 years old — didn't believe them.

PARTLY TO HEAD the doc off at the pass, Congress passed the Social Security Bill.

It set up a plan of payroll deductions which would go to a government fund to guarantee a pension to those who retired at age 65. Initially, employer and employee each put one per cent of the first $3,000 of the employee's annual pay into the fund.

It was recognized that this would not produce any $200 per month for the oldsters, but such an amount was considered "pie in the sky." When the first Social Security check was paid to Ida M. Fuller of Ludlow, Vt., in 1940, it was for $41.30. Miss Fuller is still alive and now drawing over $100 per month from Social Security.)

A lot has happened to Social Security since the bill was passed in 1937. It has been broadened to include many classes of employees who were not initially eligible. Benefits have been increased, so that the maximum payment is now $3,660 a year plus Medicare. And to finance the increases, the bite has been made deeper. It is now 5.85 per cent of the first $13,200 annually, by both employer and employee. And under an automatic escalation plan adopted by Congress in 1972, it will continue to go up every year — fantastically, unless inflation is reversed.

NOW, FISCAL experts say Social Security is nearly broke. Payments will have to be cut or taxes greatly increased.

The reason, as pointed out in an article in the November issue of Nation's Business: "The Social Security system operates through transfer financing — taxes taken in from workers go immediately out in benefits to retirees and other recipients, not into any reserve or individual account."

In other words, Social Security is not funded, as the government now requires most private pension plans to be.

And because the number of beneficiaries is rapidly approaching the number who pay into Social Security — the ratio now is about three payees to each beneficiary — the system simply won't finance itself.

NOT ONLY THAT, but it's a poor buy any way you look at it.

Michael Mitchell, Marin County auditor-controller, did some figuring and came up with this:

Employees covered by Social Security would pay in at the present rate — without the automatic increases now embodied in the legislation — $16,500 in 20 years. Matched by the employer, this would put $33,000 in the fund. If this were put out at 7½ per cent interest (the current rate for long-term savings and loan investments), at the end of 20 years the fund would contain $75,250.

Just the interest on that — again at 7½ per cent — would yield about $470 per month. But the present maximum Social Security benefit is $305 per month.

"The only thing I can conclude," commented Mitchell, "is that Social Security is tax and not a retirement system."

Yet this system is bankrupting itself while it takes $825 per year (current maximum) from each wage earner.

IT IS BECOMING obvious that Social Security is not what it was intended or pretended to be.

Even Doc Townsend's scheme might have worked better.

MARQUIS CHILDS:

Ford's Accomplishment At Vladivostok Helps Compensate For Failures At Home

The Christian Science Monitor

WASHINGTON — Thanks to the momentum of the past, President Ford scored at Vladivostok what appears to be a notable breakthrough in the control of offensive nuclear weapons. At the same time he joined with Chairman Leonid Brezhnev in appealing for a new start on negotiations in the Middle East.

While what the chairman and the president signed was hailed as an agreement, Secretary of State Kissinger made it plain that months of negotiation must follow on the complex details of the vast arsenal on both sides of the divide. That suggests a major qualifier still to be proved out.

Yet it is as of this moment a success, and in foreign policy it gives the president a sorely needed plus to compensate for the failures at home. Ford returns to find disarray in his own official household and a continuing muddle over energy that owes a lot to his own inaction.

KISSINGER STAKED OUT a comprehensive challenging position for cooperation with the oil-consuming countries and eventually with the oil producers. Nothing happened. The leadership that might have come from President Ford was missing.

Sec. of Interior Rogers Morton, whom the president appointed head of an energy council, suggested the need for an increased gasoline tax to conserve energy and cut oil imports. Publicly rebuffed by the president, the head of the energy council retreated in confusion.

The muddle owes a lot to the conflict of authority in the White House between the Nixonites and the Ford recruits. But a new figure is moving up with a portent of drastic change in the near future.

DONALD M. RUMSFELD, 42 years old, fresh as paint, is a take-charge chief of staff. He has moved rapidly to reshape the White House personnel and that is only the beginning.

Those in the administration following Rumsfeld's rapid rise believe he will have a strong hand in strengthening Ford's position in Congress and the country. This involves selecting at least three lame-duck Republicans who will be rewarded, not with top posts, but with offices in which they can build political fences.

More surprising is the likelihood that at least two Democrats will be offered places to promote the concept of a united front on energy and the Middle East.

As for "Rummy" himself, with his limitless ambition encompassing the presidency, a cabinet post is in order in the new year, although which one is still uncertain. This goes with an insider's prediction that 80 per cent of the present cabinet will have vanished by early spring.

Given his rapidly expanding powers, Rumsfeld is sure to have a hand in trying to resolve the energy muddle. Despite the Ford stonewall, there are those high in the administration who believe that, since voluntarism is not working, some form of compulsion is essential if oil imports are to be cut back.

ONE IS SEC. of the Treasury William E. Simon. He intends to put the case for a 20-cents-a-gallon tax increase up to the president. It is combined with a system of tax rebates to cushion the blow for low-income motorists commuting long distances to work. With his successful record in finance, Simon is well equipped to make the case.

Given his remarkable rise since he came from his post as ambassador to NATO in Brussels, Rumsfeld has inevitably made enemies. But the rock on which he builds is the loyalty of the president. When he came to Congress from a safe Republican district in Illinois, he struck up a friendship with Ford. He was one of four House members leading the push to make Ford minority leader.

RETURNING FROM his Asian tour with the success at Vladivostok, the President should be emboldened to take the decisive steps, so long avoided, here at home. High prices and the energy muddle count for much more in the popularity scale than the long-term promise of a stop to the nuclear arms race.

The burder we impose on our presidents is a cruel one. They must be head of state, carrying out all the ceremonial and cosmetic functions, as well as head of government trying to run the country.

When he announced he would run for a full term in 1976, Ford said he enjoyed being president. Certainly he shines with dignity and spirit in the ceremonial role. Getting down to resolving the conflicts of a country deeply divided is far more formidable.

Riding Horses And Golf Courses Must Go

Riding horses and golf courses must go!

The global food crisis argues for every moral-minded person of this planet to inspect his living habits for extravagances which affect the welfare of other humans.

In Marin two extravagant diversions — horseback riding and golfing (to name but two) — come to the fore. Besides being practically useless pursuits, they may well rob famished families of food.

Horses, if not necessary as work creatures, certainly are not needed on riding trails or bridle paths at this critical time in history. Often energy is wasted in trucking the quadrupeds to the riding sites. Worse, the large amount of feed which the horses consume is wasted and could be used to better advantage by feeding swine and dairy herds to provide food to fight hunger.

As for golfing, the ferilizer used on the fairways is better used for the growing feed and garden crops than for the nurturing of grass which is constantly run over rough-shod by golf carts and trodden under foot by men.

Flabby-muscled hedonists who insist on following these diversions are wasting vital forms of energy, are diverting food from hungry mouths, and surely are not going the right moral direction. Over them could hang the judgmental condemnation: "I was hungry and you gave me no food."

14-Year-Old Has Message For Youth

I would like to speak to you young people out there. I'm 14 and I have something to say.

I would like to congratulate you on your early retirement. How old are you? Fifteen? Eighteen? Twenty-three? Gee, your parents aren't going to retire 'til they're 50 or 60. You beat 'em to it! Why not? That's all they think about, so it seems. They prepare for it. Talk about it. Live for it. It's what their future's all about.

But think a minute. Do you have a job to do? A land to calm? A world to save? Seas to conquer? Forests to free? A way of life to win? Don't stop and rest now. Don't escape through drugs now. Don't let your morals go to pieces now. Not now! Don't mess up the future. The future is now. Keep your mind clear and clean. Be informed. Find knowledge. Find wisdom.

What's the matter? Don't you care? Don't you want to try? Are you afraid? Are you weak? Is the future going to pot? Or has it already? You're pretty smart. You can think. But if you're high on drugs, or morally thin, or uncaring, you can't think too well, can you? Are you so bitter that it's no good anymore for you? Wake up! . . .

There's still one foolproof way to preserve you now and in the future. Love, care, peace. Peace within. Serve yourself and others, but most of all, serve God. He's the only one that can get us out of this mess. Read His book. It does apply to today. . .

Jesus Christ isn't old fashioned, nor is He a fad. He's the truth. The only reality, the only way to find peace. To find the things that everyone is looking for. It's so easy! Ask Him about it. . .

Highlands Story Backs Legal Aid's Position

As chairman of the board of directors of the Legal Aid Society of Marin County, I was gratified by the Nov. 23 report by your able staffer, Paul Liberatore, on the evident intention of the developers of the Richardson Highlands project to isolate it from Marin City.

The story amply supported many contentions of our clients in the current lawsuit aimed at opening this project to persons, like themselves, who cannot afford the $50,000-plus units planned to attract "swinging singles" types to the development . . .

Perhaps many of those highminded public officials who recently blasted the Legal Aid Society for representing its clients in this case were likewise unaware of the racist nature of the development.

Perhaps, even, some of these will have the grace to concede it, and then reaffirm the right of poor people to have their day in court.

No matter; the Legal Aid Society will continue to represent its clients regardless of political pressure to abandon them to injustices, obvious and not so obvious . . .

Highlands Report Misleading, Not Funny

Some time ago I read about a newspaper in the south calling a political candidate a practicing heterosexual and saying his mother was a noted thespian.

Your article on Richardson Highlands is just as misleading and not as funny. It seems to say that this development is going to put down the people who live here in Marin City. I have had many conversations with the developer since he was selected. He has been cooperative and has spent much time with community residents. We are looking forward to his development. He is working with our affirmative action committee on an affirmative marketing plan. He certainly has shown no interest in isolating his homes from ours.

Why did your reporter quote a lot of reports and never investigate the other side?

I believe in freedom of the press but it's about time you keep your reporters honest. It seems they are trying every way to stop this development.

Nothing Half-Hearted About Mexico's Anti-Inflation Program

MEXICO CITY— If Mexican If Mexican President Luis Echeverria had told Mr. Ford what he had in his briefcase when the two met along the Arizona-Sonora border last month, Mr. Ford would have commiserated with him. But if our president could see what has happened here in the few weeks since, he would do the weeping alone.

Mexico, even more than the United States, is being throttled by acute inflation. As in Washington, government officials here try to soothsay the inflation rate — they put it at about 25 per cent over the last year, while responsible private-sector economists say it is closer to 40 per cent. Whichever, it is two or three times what we are experiencing north of the Rio Grande.

WHEN THE TWO PRESIDENTS had their ceremonial meeting, Mr. Ford already had laid down his halfhearted program of inflation-recession remedies. They included the proposed 5 per cent income tax surcharge, which promptly was disowned even by Mr. Ford's Republican colleagues, and specifically did not include the gasoline tax increase which might do double duty against the energy shortage and the inflation rate.

The trouble met by one and the exclusion of the other both are manifestations of a hesitant presidency. That is not the kind they have in Mexico, either historically or personally.

What Echeverria had in his briefcase last month was his own package of economic cures. As soon as he returned here, he announced them.

GASOLINE WOULD GO up from 64 to 96 cents a gallon. A tax of 15 per cent would be added to bar and restaurant charges (except those on hotel bills, to protect the precious tourist industry). The top income tax bracket would jump from 42 per cent to 50 per cent. New taxes would be laid on water, homes and automobiles, the last already outlandishly expensive.

Since Echeverria wants to play down inflation, he advertised his remedies as means to raise funding for greatly increased oil development and food production, both legitimately urgent matters here.

And now, less than a month after he first mentioned it, while the principal evidence of Mr. Ford's program still is a lot of WIN buttons, most of the Echeverria package already is in effect.

For only in the broadest way does a Mexican president have to worry about how a gasoline tax or bean price boost will sit with the Mexican voter. There is only one party that matters here — Echeverria's Partido Revolucionario Institucional. And unlike Mr. Ford, Echeverria does not have to confront either serious legislative opposition or a reelection campaign — he can serve only one term. So he can make strong proposals with confidence, and they have the effective force of demands.

I'M NOT LEADING UP to suggesting a constitutional revision to bring our own in line with the revolutionary document in which the Mexicans still profess such pride. Even in our theoretically balanced system, it is possible for the executive to produce action, even against the numerical odds of the opposition party and against the stubborn economic trends. It has happened before.

But in a country like ours, where the backing of the people and the Congress is essential, a president cannot enlist them in emergency action while he himself is still reluctant to admit that any emergency exists. Insipid words and programs produce a shrug of the shoulders. What has got us out of jams in the past has been drastic action, called for in blunt and inspirational terms, glossing over nothing. The American people are ready for it, straining to hear it, but it has not come.

Former Members Might Help Reform Legislature

By EARL G. WATERS

Too much cannot be written of the need for a thorough review of the legislative process as it has developed in the short period since 1966. Gov. Ronald Reagan and Gov.-elect Edmund G. Brown Jr. have spoken out in amazing harmony on the subject. Senate President Pro Tem James Mills and Speaker Leo McCarthy have spoken of changes they hope to make.

One may term this need "reform" or "change," but by whatever euphemism it should now be clear that the so-called "improvements" of the past decade have gone awry.

IT REALLY STARTED back with the abolition of cross filing, which pre-dated the annual sessions, the "full-time" legislature, and the two-year sessions.

Along with these came substantial increases in compensation and the somewhat irresponsible additions of "fringe" benefits which include a totally unjustified growth of staff in the form of aides, consultants and assistants. Rather than resulting in better legislation, it has seen far more hasty, ill-considered measures being passed.

In scanning the average age and length of service of the upcoming legislature, it is readily apparent that the knowledge which can be gained only through experience will be lacking. Few have been around long enough to know how the legislature functioned when it met for only a few months every other year.

DON A. ALLEN, who served in the Assembly from 1939 to 1949 and from 1957 to 1967, is one who witnessed the way it was and the way it has become. Allen, on his own initiative, put together a loosely organized association of former legislative members. To date this group has been meeting annually solely for social purposes.

It would seem present lawmakers are missing a golden opportunity to benefit from the experience of those who have gone before. Their views on how a legislature can work best for the people would be invaluable.

That these former members still retain an active interest in state government is evidenced by various communications setting forth constructive suggestions. One, Sen. George W. Rochester of Los Angeles, reaches back to 1927, when he served one term in the Assembly followed by a term in the Senate. Another, Judge George G. Crawford of San Diego, was of more recent vintage serving from 1957 to 1961.

Regardless of their points of view, those seeking to re-establish an ability in the legislature to cope with the problems of government could do far worse than call upon the wealth of knowledge and experience possessed by the former members.

Non-Senator Candidate Puts Everyone In Tizzy

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nearly everyone was stunned by the audacity of Morris K. Udall in declaring himself a candidate for president.

"Senator who?" citizens began asking when they heard the news.

Informed that Udall was not a senator at all but a U.S. representative from Arizona, people became giddy and disoriented.

TYPICAL OF the consternation created by the announcement was the reaction of my neighbor, C. Howard Tiddlehood. He was at my door within minutes.

"You write a lot about of politics," he said. "Maybe you can settle this argument: isn't there something in the Constitution that says you have to be a senator to run for president?"

"Believe it or not," I replied, "there is no constitutional provision that a presidential candidate must be a senator. Nor, strange as it may seem, is there any constitutional provision that a senator must be a presidential candidate. It just works out that way."

TIDDLEHOOD LOOKED perplexed. "But doesn't the Constitution say that for a House member to become president he must wait for a vice presidential vacancy, get himself appointed to fill it and then wait for the presidency to become vacant."

I assured him that just because President Ford took that route from the House of Representatives to the White House did not mean he could not have sought the office directly.

Tiddlehood walked away shaking his head, still unable to adjust to the idea of a nonsenator, especially a congressional type non-senator, making the race.

ACTUALLY, AND THIS may come as a surprise to many folks, House membership could prove advantageous, once the initial shock wears off.

Coincident with Udall's announcement, a new public opinion survey showed that political parties are rapidly losing power and influence among the electorate.

"I'm not very optimistic about the future of the political parties," an official of the polling company said.

By 1976, Democrats and Republicans may have disintegrated completely. In which case, other political organisms will spring up to replace the parties. Legislative bodies, for instance.

ONE CAN READILY foresee the House of Representatives holding a convention and nominating a presidential candidate to run against the Senate's candidate.

Udall, thanks to his early start, would be in a strong position to become the House's standard-bearer.

The odds against reaching the White House in this wise is pretty long, of course. But not as long as doing it Ford's way.

Britain Will Subsidize Businesses

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson said yesterday his Labor party government plans to pump public money into flagging private businesses to keep them going.

He said this will mean increasing state ownership or control of such firms coupled with increased worker participation in running them.

The prime minister's plan, outlined in a keynote speech to his Labor party's annual convention, are aimed at curtailing business collapses in Britain's economic crisis. He called, too, for unions to curb pay demands to help counter the inflationary spiral.

Wilson said this plan "is a new and selective instrument for creating and financing investment where more generalized financial policies have failed."

He added "Where goes state money for investment goes also public accountability and an appropriate public share in the equity."

"We shall inject public money case by case and plant by plant where it is needed for exports or modernization and to create new jobs in the economically depressed regions."

Wilson said "There also will be a greater measure of industrial democracy and worker participation than we have ever previously sought to create in this country.

Simple Steps To Aid The Hungry

By DAVID F. SALISBURY
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — The U.S. could help feed hungry people around the world by taking two immediate steps, according to a noted Harvard nutrition expert.

It could cut down on alcoholic drinks made from grains. The grain that goes into alcohol made in the U.S. alone could feed 20 million people a year, says the nutritionist, Dr. Jean Mayer.

Americans also could give up eating meat two days a week. Currently, more U.S. grain goes to feed animals than people. As a bonus, eating less meat would improve Americans' health, cost less, and be good for the conscience, he said.

Americans also could insist that the U.S. give more money to international relief agencies, particularly UNICEF. While the world is spending $350 billion on armaments, UNICEF has been unable to raise $100 million to help give food to starving children.

"Of course, the United States cannot do the whole job," says Dr. Mayer. But taking these steps — becoming totally committed to ending hunger — would put America in the position where it can honestly begin putting pressure on other nations to do their share.

Dr. Mayer, one of the experts who attempted to lay a groundwork for the World Food Conference in Rome, says:

"Unless there is a push by the general public, there is no chance the conference goals will be met."

All too symbolic of the Rome gathering, he says, is this scene:

A delegate from starving Bangladesh gives his address before a virtually empty lecture hall while many delegates attend a cocktail party and drink alcohol distilled from grain that might have fed the hungry.

He feels that lack of U.S. commitment and leadership is greatly to blame. The U.S. is the world's largest exporter of food.

"Up to this point America has had a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde representation," says Dr. Mayer. "Dr. Kissinger (U.S. Secretary of State) proposes the elimination of hunger within 25 years. And Earl Butz (U.S. Secretary of Agriculture) maintains that we cannot do anything about the problem."

Dr. Mayer, one of the architects of the U.S. food-stamp program, is convinced that abolition of hunger is possible. In the short term, however, it will require a drastic shift in the way people in the industrial nations eat.

As a result, he is asking Americans to cut back on meat — and drink.

So far, the U.S. has been treating the Soviet Union and the oil-producing nations with kid gloves, complains the Harvard nutritionist.

Yet the Soviet Union is one of the prime culprits behind present shortages, he feels. Its harvests vary wildly from year to year, but the Soviets insist that the amount of their grain reserves and agricultural forecasts are military secrets.

By increasing the costs of energy and fertilizer, the oil-producing nations also have added to the plight of the poorer countries. In Dr. Mayer's eyes, the oil producers should be giving poor countries low-interest loans to buy grain and provide low-cost fertilizer.

What Dr. Mayer suggests are emergency measures; the real answer to the problem is increased food production and slowing population growth.

But if nations continue to "arm to the teeth" and fail to rise to the challenge of feeding the starving millions, the world is headed for catastrophe, he says.

Italy Not As Bad Off As It Might Appear

By TAKASHI OKA
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

ROME — Italy's seemingly endless political and economic woes are a symptom of the malaise gripping the Western world as a whole.

How long, Western commentators ask, will the government just formed by veteran Christian Democrat Aldo Moro last? It came into being only after six weeks of tortuous negotiations during which leftist parties accused Washington of trying to engineer early elections.

Meanwhile, inflation raged, rumors of coups and countercoups multiplied, and the nation's social fabric was frayed by several more strands.

Italy has no natural resources to speak of. It has a poverty-stricken agricultural south from which eight million people have migrated northwards in search of work.

Its political leadership is weak. Its Communists poll more than one-fourth the votes in the country. Its trade deficit this year will be more than $8 billion, and it is already deeply in debt to Western banks and international agencies.

Some friends of Italy have been asking:

Do not these handicaps make Italy a likely candidate to become the first Western country to succumb to the oil crisis — to go bankrupt, to be taken over by Communists, or Fascists, or by the Army? In short, to cease to be a democracy?

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger is reported to have expressed acute concern over these possibilities, and to have used this concern as justification for his efforts to forge a common front of Western nations to tackle the consequences of the oil crisis together — before it is too late.

But here in Rome the restaurants off the Via Veneto are as crowded as ever. American businessmen in Milan report boom conditions. With 24 per cent inflation, creeping joblessness, and a four-day work week at Fiat, Italy will still record a 4 per cent growth in its gross national product this year.

What accounts for the paradox? Some Italians say it is the outsiders who are at fault.

Italy, in European terms is still a developing country, one official continued. It needs continued economic growth.

Of the Italian trade deficit of more than $8 billion this year, $6 billion is accounted for by the increased price of oil. Whatever the government in power, the Treasury officials remain conservative; they have squeezed credit and increased tax collections and hope to eliminate the non-oil portion of the deficit by the end of next year.

American officials here tend to agree that "the situation is grave, but not desperate."

"If you look at the Mediterranean as a whole, Italy is still the best place for a businessman wishing to set up a new plant," one American said.

Thus perceptions of the Italian crisis differ, depending on whether one is inside or outside the country.

As long as the economic pie continues growing, even if slowly, there is not likely to be a revolution. Social discontent does not seem to be reaching flash point.

The lesson the Communists have learned from Chile is that in order to come to power, they need not only the support of the workers, but that of truck drivers and shopkeepers as well. They need, in short, a convincing majority. Italy still has time, moderate Italians say, and Dr. Kissinger's fears are exaggerated.

Within the Italian intellectual community, there is a pervasive belief that Washington precipitated the most recent government crisis to provoke early elections in which voters would be asked to choose between the Communists or the Right.

There has not been such an election in recent times. The Christian Democrats themselves are a political spectrum running from right to pretty far left, while the Communists have sought a "historic compromise" with the Christian Democrats rather than outright opposition.

Developer's Suit To Be Considered

The Corte Madera Town Council will consider developer Ernest W. Hahn's $10 million damage claim against the town when it meets Monday at 7:30 p.m. at Town Hall.

Hahn has threatened to sue the town if the claim is not upheld. The council will meet in closed session with Atty. Albert J. Bianchi to discuss the possible litigation, then will vote on the claim in open session.

The council also will discuss the wording for the March 4 open space bond issue which was forged this week by town officials and bond attorneys. Actual vote may not come until Tuesday night, however, when the council and planning commission meet in joint workshop session at 7:30 p.m. in Town Hall.

Teammate Says Ford Doing Well

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Take it from Silas McGee of the 1930 Grand Rapids high school football champions: Gerald Ford always wore a helmet when he played.

President Lyndon B. Johnson, irate with Ford's tactics as House Republican leader, has been widely quoted as saying "Ford played too much football without a helmet."

Not so, said McGee, Ford "wore his helmet always."

McGee, a 61-year-old black retired longshoreman who played halfback on the unbeaten 1930 team, added Ford "was a doggone good football player — ahead of his time."

Football players today "couldn't tie his shoes," said McGee, and added that "Junie," as he called Ford, "Was the mainstay, the aggregate" of the South High team. "I was second."

McGee told reporters that he felt that Ford was doing a good job "running the ship of state."

Ford, he added, does not "have an exaggerated sense of his own importance."

He said, "That cat's in there trying . . ."

Firemen Stage Brief Strike

MONTREAL (UPI) — Montreal firemen staged a brief walkout yesterday, leaving the city without fire protection for the second time in four weeks.

The 500-man overnight shift walked out after 11 men who complained about working and sanitation conditions at their substation were sent home. The men returned to their jobs four hours later after an appeal by firemen's association president Jean L'Abbe.

No serious fires were reported during the walkout. Calls were handled by 55 supervisors.

Four weeks ago, the entire 2,400-member force staged a three-day strike which saw an estimated $2 million in damages caused by unchecked fires.

ALMANAC

Today is Friday, Nov. 29, the 333rd day of 1974 with 32 to follow.

The moon is full. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars and Saturn. The evening stars are Venus and Jupiter.

American author Louisa May Alcott was born Nov. 29, 1832.

On this day in history:

In 1890, the first Army-Navy football game was played. The Middies won, 24-0.

In 1929, Lt. Cmdr. Richard Byrd and three crewmen became the first persons to fly over the South Pole.

In 1963, a Canadian plane crash near Montreal killed 118 persons.

Also in 1963, President Lyndon Johnson appointed the Warren Commission to investigate the assassination of President John Kennedy.

A thought for the day: American writer Henry Davis Thoreau said, "Time is but the stream I go fishing in."

'Tis the season to mail early.

SOUTH RUFFS

The defenders lead three rounds of clubs, forcing South to ruff. South takes the ace of spades, ruffs a spade in dummy, leads a trump to the queen and ruffs another spade in dummy.

Right here is where East must start paying out rope. He must not overruff dummy.

If East overruffs and returns a club (his best defense) South ruffs, and then ruffs another spade in dummy. Then he leads a trump to his own hand, drawing East's last trump. The spades are set up, and South easily wins the rest.

DISCARDS DIAMOND

Instead of overruffing, East patiently discards a dimond. South returns to his hand by leading a trump to the king.

South leads another spade and ruffs with dummy's last trump. Once more East must refuse to overruff. By this time East and South are down to one trump each. If East overruffed, he would leave South in full control.

When East discards another diamond, declarer is dead. He can take the ace of diamonds and ruff a diamond with his last trump. South leads a good spade, and East finally ruffs. Then East's last club takes the setting trick.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one spade, and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠ - K J 9 5
♥ - 5
♦ - Q 9 4 3
♣ - K Q 10 6.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three spades.

The double raise in a major suit shows strong trump support of four or more cards, with total support of about 13 to 16 points. If partner opened in either minor suit, however, you would bid one spade rather than jump to three of his suit.

Woman Found In Car Wreckage

NORWICH, Conn. (UPI) — Sherri Charles, 19, of Hartford, Conn., was found delirious and suffering from frostbite and two broken ankles yesterday in a wrecked car where she had been pinned for 44 hours.

She was in satisfactory condition in a hospital today.

TONIGHT'S TELEVISION

Unusual on television tonight:

KCRA (3), KRON (4), 8:30 p.m. — Winston Churchill's chronicle of events which exploded into the Second World War, "The Gathering Storm," is dramatized in the "Hallmark Hall of Fame" special presentation. Richard Burton stars as Winston Churchill in this drama focusing on events which led to the outbreak of the war. It is based on the first volume of Churchill's memoirs of that holocaust.

KPIX (5), KXTV (10), 9 p.m. — Sebastian Cabot, starring as Kris Kringle, becomes the center of a furor involving big business, science and the government when he insists he's the genuine article, in "Miracle on 34th Street." This contemporary version of the 1947 film classic also stars Jane Alexander, David Hartman and Jim Backus.

Special Grass Tests Set To Help Golfers To Putt

FRESNO (AP) — Your favorite golf course may benefit from research planned by a Fresno State University graduate student.

Bill Homyak, majoring in ornamental horticulture, is planning fungicide trials this spring on bentgrasses to see which varieties are best for golf greens.

"Bentgrasses are used on greens, and one of the problems is disease, of which brown patch is one of the worst in the hot summer," said Dr. Gary M. Koch, associate professor of plant science and Homyak's advisor.

Homyak says he plans to plant different varieties in 2-by-20 foot plots, which will be fumigated to kill fungus. Several new varieties will be planted, including two from the University of California at Irvine.

Fungicides from various firms will be tested to determine which are best for keeping fungus outbreaks under control when summer temperatures in the San Joaquin Valley begin to soar, Kock said.

The best way to clean electrical units on a kitchen range is to turn the setting to "high," permitting spills to burn off, according to consumer specialists at Pennsylvania State University.

Energy Test For Children Is Planned

STAMFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Children of the energy crisis need to know more about how far precious energy resources will go, a Washington, D.C., educational institute believes, so it has devised a testing program to increase their knowledge.

The program was developed by the Bolton Institute, specialists in environmental and energy conservation education. Advertisements publicizing the program, aimed at grades four through eight, are being paid for by the Continental Oil Co., and are to appear beginning Monday.

"Children today are facing an increasingly energy-conscious, environment-conscious way of life. They must have the answers. And the sooner the better," the ads say.

The program is due for a test run in the next few weeks in New England.

One question that might shed some light on energy IQ's is which gives more light for the same amount of energy — one 75 watt bulb or three 25 watt bulbs?

The answer is the 75 watter.

Here's another: The average American uses two, four, or eight times more energy than the average person in the rest of the world?

The answer is eight.

If the test is successful, the program will be extended to other parts of the country. And, program sponsors hope, the kids will go home to try out the questions on Mom and Dad.

St. Anthony's Serves Record For Holiday

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The line was three persons wide and about two blocks long when Saint Anthony's Dining Room opened for its 24th annual Thanksgiving Day dinner.

When the door closed for the last time a record 4,557 persons had feasted without charge on turkey, stuffing, mashed potatoes and gravy, vegetables, cranberry sauce, tossed salad, bread and butter, pie, ice cream and coffee.

"We are very grateful to all the people in the area who donated food, money and time to make this dinner possible," said the Rev. Floyd Lotito, assistant director of the dining room that serves more than 1,700 free dinners daily.

RHODDA, GREENE LEAD LEGISLATORS

Nearly 450 School Bills Passed

By BRYCE W. ANDERSON

Who writes California's school laws?

Just about every legislator gets into the act. The bulky Education Code is amended far more than any other portion of the statutes. Nearly 450 bills amending it — some of which made multiple changes — became law during the 1973-74 legislative session.

Topping the list in school law changes — most of which will go into effect Jan. 1 — were two Sacramentans, Sen. Albert S. Rodda and Assemblyman Leroy F. Greene, both Democrats. Nineteen of Rodda's "Ed Code" bills passed both houses, and 18 of them were signed by the governor. Greene got 20 bills through both houses, but three of them fell under Gov. Ronald Reagan's veto.

Rodda chaired the Senate Education Committee. So Rodda and Greene had a bit of an advantage over other legislators when it came to school law bills.

At that, Assemblyman John Vasconcellos, D-Campbell, came near capturing the title as most productive "Ed Code" writer. Twenty bills of which he was author or principal author passed the two houses. But four of them (including a pair which bore Vasconcellos's name because he chaired the Joint Committee on the Master Plan for Higher Education, which produced them) were vetoed by the governor.

In the Senate the legislators who produced the most school bills which passed were, senators Donald L. Grunsky, R-Watsonville; John Stull, R-Encinitas; Fred W. Marler Jr., R-Redding; Alfred E. Alquist, D-San Jose; Arlen Gregorio, D-San Mateo, and Mervyn M. Dymally, D-Los Angeles. In the Assembly, they were assemblymen Bill Greene, D-Los Angeles; Dixon Arnett, R-Redwood City; John F. Dunlap, D-Vallejo; Jerry Lewis, R-San Bernardino, and Ken MacDonald, D-Ventura.

Dymally had the worst luck with vetoes, getting 13 school bills through the legislature but losing seven of them to Reagan's blue pencil.

Most of Senator Rodda's successful bills dealt with detail in operation of the State Department of Education and the California State University and Colleges. However, his Senate Bill 2027 raises salaries for county superintendents, and his SB 411 expands the state's college opportunity grant program.

Leroy Greene, who is an engineer, had several successful bills dealing with school buildings and lands. One of these (AB 142) calls for state aid in paying for air-conditioning school buildings which are put to year-around use. Another (AB 143) requires districts to make "non-use payments" on unused school sites (one of Greene's earlier bills putting such unused sites back on the tax rolls brought great outcry from school districts). Of a different nature, Greene's AB 4151 calls for setting up "professional development centers" for in-service faculty training.

Alquist had the unusual distinction of getting the same bill passed twice and vetoed twice. His SB 692 called for removal of material of derogratory nature from the personnel files of state university-colleges employees. After Reagan vetoed that, Alquist re-introduced it as SB 1808 and got it through both houses again — only to have it vetoed once more.

Because of Assemblyman Arnett's AB 1489, school boards in all districts with more than 1,000 enrollment can vote after Jan. 1 to pay themselves. For districts with 1,000 to 10,000 pupils, pay is limited to $20 per meeting for not more than six meetings a month. From there it goes up to $75 per meeting or $750 per month in districts with more than 400,000 enrollment.

Bill Greene's successful bills mostly dealt with vocational education; Lewis's, with teacher retirement; MacDonald's, with cleaning up the "Ed Code" and repealing obsolete or unneeded sections.

Vasconcellos authored successful bills to, among other things, devise a master plan for migrant child education, encourage year-around schools and open up school board-teacher committee "meet and confer" proceedings.

Alquist's SB 364 will eliminate some special elections to fill school board vacancies. He and Marler were authors of principal finance bills which passed.

One of Gregorio's successful bills, SB 1114, may bring a new round of school building bond elections, for it calls for replacement of buildings that are found to be on earthquake fault lines. Gregorio also introduced the bill (SB 71) to permit high school students to smoke on campus, which Reagan vetoed.

Two of Grunsky's successful bills (SB 29 and SB 1575) call for special education for mentally retarded children beginning when they are 3 years old, while Gregorio's SB 957 provides for education of handicapped children starting at age 6 months.

SB 2039 by Marler requires that elementary school districts with fewer than 2,500 pupils purchase supplies cooperatively through their county schools office.

Stull's SB 1845 will enable parents to see their children's personal records at school and provides a procedure for expunging false or questionable material from them. His SB 1057 requires that the principal notify the child's parents in writing when a child is suspended from school.

Dymally, who will be lieutenant governor next year, pushed through a series of "women's lib" bills, some of which fell under Reagan's vetoes, as did Dymally's SB 64, repealing the teacher evaluation section of the Stull-Rodda Act, and his SB 2454, for a state-wide program of in-service training for school administrators.

TELEVISION REVIEW

Burton In A Rare TV Special Tonight

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Richard Burton makes one of his rare television appearances tonight on NBC in "The Gathering Storm," a dramatization of the first volume of Winston Churchill's history of World War II.

Burton, who portrays the late English statesman in the years immediately preceding the outbreak of war with Nazi Germany, labors mightily to bring to life Churchill's soul and character.

Unfortunately, he and his acting colleagues are saddled with a stiff script by Colin Morris which, while touching on all the key historical points, falls as surprisingly flat as the direction by Herbert Wise.

It's a disappointment because this 90-minute program, made in England for showing both by NBC and the British Broadcasting Corporation, had many things going for it — among them adequate financing, a good cast and the opportunity to film and tape the show in the actual locales in which Churchill lived and worked.

But all this goes for naught because of the script's tendency to reduce the major and minor figures of "The Gathering Storm" to one-dimensional players in an often harrumphing historical pageant.

The crises, from the abdication of King Edward VIII in 1936 to the outbreak in war in September 1939 come and go with suitably grave and important sounds from the participants in the drama.

There are brief personal glimpses of Churchill in private life, a man advised by his gentle wife, challenged by his quarrelsome son, Randolph, and counseled by his close friend, Lord Beaverbrook.

The only time the special seems to come to life is towards the end, when Churchill, as Britain's new wartime prime minister, makes that famous 1940 speech to Parliament and tells England: "I have nothing to offer but blood, toil, tears and sweat."

Cheyenne Pulls Back Its Welcome

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — Mayor Bill Nation has a nice, quiet town he is proud of and often when other people notice it too they drop him a line. But now he has a letter he is not so sure about.

J. T. Wilson of Tamal wrote to say he was so impressed with Cheyenne that he wanted to move his organization's national headquarters there.

"Ordinarily, I'd be very enthusiastic about such a letter," Nation said. "But I'm sure the residents of Cheyenne don't want any part of anyone associated with the memory of Adolf Hitler."

Wilson's group is called the "Order of the SS."

Ford Recalling 432 Compacts

DETROIT, Mich. (UPI) — The owners of new 36,000 luxury compact Ford Granadas and Mercury Monarchs are being notified that 432 of them may be driving cars that could suffer loss of steering control after extended use.

The Ford Motor Co. said yesterday that the cars still are too new to cause any concern among owners. There have been no reports of any steering failures, a Ford spokesman said.

The problem is an upper suspension arm that may have been made from steel below acceptable thickness and then installed on the cars between Oct. 8 and Oct. 31, the spokesman said. The recall involved about 23 per cent of the 1975 models that were first introduced in late September.

Woman, 80, Dies At Home

Clara Jane Masulia, 80, of 1027 Third Street, Apt. B, Novato, died at home, apparently of natural causes, between 5 p.m. Wednesday and 11:10 a.m. yesterday, according to the coroner's office.

Mrs. Masulis was discovered by a neighbor, T. H. Ellison, who was checking on her welfare.

She reportedly had a history of heart attacks. Funeral arrangements were pending today at the Redwood Chapel Funeral Home, Novato.

Jewelry Salesman, Samples Missing

SAN JOSE (UPI) — A search has begun for Ben Rudman of Los Angeles, a jewelry salesman missing since Tuesday, the police reported today.

Investigators said Rudman's room in the Travel Lodge here had not been slept in for three days and $100,000 in jewelry samples also were missing.

Burton Vote Against Racial Quota

I-J Special Report

WASHINGTON — Rep. John L. Burton, D-Sixth District, voted against prohibiting the Office of Civil Rights from imposing a racial quota system in allocating funds to school districts.

Burton, whose district includes Marin and part of San Francisco, was on the losing end as the House voted 220-169 to prohibit withholding of funds unless school districts assigned teachers and students on a racial basis.

The Marin-San Francisco congressmen voted for a series of appropriation measures in recent roll calls tabulated by Government Research Corp.

He voted for an increase of $198.6 million in federal education funds, which passed 280-114.

He voted for a $5 million increase in library funding, which passed 280-120.

He voted for a $25.4 million increase in nutrition programs for the elderly, which passed 282-125.

However, he voted for deleting $100,000 from former President Nixon's transition expenses, which lost 169-228, and against deleting $55,000 for Nixon's presidential pension, which lost 46-344. He did not vote on other roll calls involving payments to Nixon. The measure that finally passed the House allowed the resigned president $55,000 for his pension and $45,000 for other expenses up to next Feb. 9.

America's China Legation Tired Of Unisex Images

PEKING (UPI) — Get them to one side in a crowded room and the men and women who man America's legation in Peking will tell you the thing they miss most is sex.

Oh, not the extramarital or beddy-bye sort of sex. No, what they miss are such life-ticklers as women's skirts, a low neckline, a meaningful wink.

Communism tends to be puritanical. And the Chinese are zealots at it. Here the women dress as the men —the blue smock or neck-buttoned tunic and the full trousers.

The haircuts are pretty unisex too.

Peking has few billboards. But the women on them are as well bundled as the children toddling in human trains around the city.

"Did you go to the Chinese folk music show last night," a young diplomat asked me. "Well, did you see the girl playing that stringed thing in the orchestra? Wow!"

The girl had worn a skirt. It was almost floor length but it revealed a shapely ankle. It was the only revealing moment the diplomat has spotted in six months in Peking.

He, like the wives, also did not mince words when asking travelers if they had any paperbacks to spare. "We're very short of books. What we want is a pornographic novel," the diplomat said.

"Hard core, if you please," one wife said.

Donald Rumsfeld, President Ford's chief of staff, is a camera bug. With Ford in Japan, South Korea and Vladivostok, Rumsfeld often reached into the right pocket of his tan coat and plucked out his 10-year-old pocket camera.

The camera stays in the pocket when Rumsfeld is a chief actor in one of the little protocol dramas unfolding in foreign VIP travel. But in Japan, he snapped such events as a judo match. In Seoul, he leaped from his motorcade and joined the photographers massing around Ford in the mob scene greeting of the President.

In China, the Rumsfeld shutter has clicked in the Imperial Palace, at the Ming Tombs and on the Great Wall, where Rumsfeld told me the little camera has produced hundreds of pictures of his family and landmarks of travel including some Russian trawlers.

"I was out with the fleet a few months ago, on a German ship. I spotted some Soviet trawlers (trailing the Allied fleet) and jammed the camera lens against a telescope and clicked. Got some fine pictures of Russian trawlers," he said.

Tips for visitors to Peking: Eat early, since all the restaurants in town shut by 9 p.m....Some of the best antique shopping in the world is in an old alley in Peking. Tell your Chinese guide or taxi driver to take you to Lio Li Chung. Along that winding alley are four stores selling antiques approved for export. Included are ancient scrolls, vases and other art works. The prices are not cheap but there are bargains — multicolored rubbings for as low as $1 and superb reproductions of Ming Dynasty pottery for $10... Your hotel room may well cost $50, but for 75 cents the hotel laundered four shirts, three sets of underwear and three pair of socks plus cleaned a pair of trousers and sewed a ripped sweater. And did it in six hours.

Siamese Twins Leave Hospital

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Clara and Altagracia Rodriquez, two former Siamese twins separated two months ago at Children's Hospital, left the facility yesterday.

The 15-month-old girls are expected to return to their home in the Dominican Republic in a few days.

Clara and Alta were joined at the middle and lower trunk in a sitting position which forced them to face each other. They were separated Sept. 18 in an eight-hour operation headed by Dr. C. Everett Koop.

Dr. Koop had said one of the main problems the twins would have would be learning to walk.
